Three Drown, 1,000 Saved As Rock Rips Hole in Liner

Crew Abandons Dresden, German Lloyd Ship, Feared Sinking.

Many, in Panic, Hurtle Into Sea

Vessel Reaches Island Port After Sending S O S Call.

Haugesund, Norway, June 20 (AP).—Three women lost their lives today when the 14,000-ton German liner Dresden, carrying 1,000 Nazi holiday passengers, struck a rock in a fjord near here.

Panic gripped the passengers when the 14,000-ton vessel struck violently, ripping a huge hole in her hull, and listed alarmingly to port.

Over to starboard and back to port she listed and 100 terror-stricken passengers jumped overboard without waiting for lifeboats to be launched.

All of these are believed to have reached shore safely. The captain of the vessel, after flashing an S O S call, was able to beuch the vessel on Karmoey Island.

Crew Abandons Vessel.

The North German Lloyd steamer, however, was so badly damaged that her crew was forced to abandon her later.

One woman was reported lost when a lifeboat, the first to cast off, was dumped into the sea as the lowering gear broke, carrying 20 women with her. Nineteen of them were rescued, it was reported, while one drowned.

One report, not yet confirmed, said this woman was rescued too, but her arms and legs were broken.

As panic reigned aboard the big vessel, which only a few minutes before the crash had been a scene of vacation merriment, the captain calmly ordered out the lifeboats and superintended backing the Dresden under her own power and proceeding cautiously to Karmoey.

True to the traditions of the sea, the captain was one of two men last to leave the stricken steamer as she perched precariously on her island berth. The other one was the wireless operator, who had stayed at his post dispatching calls for assistance.

A thick mist hung over the fjord as the Dresden plowed toward her destination. Reports indicated the rock upon which she struck was

Ford Predicts 30-Hour Week

"Would Have Been Here by Now if 'They' Had Let Things Alone."

Detroit, June 20 (AP).—Henry Ford, who believes the "one certainty in life is there are going to be changes," today predicted eventual adoption of the five-day week and the six-hour day throughout industry.

"This country can operate on a five-day week," he said. "That and the six-hour day would have been here by now if 'they' had let things alone." He declined to amplify his reference to "they."

"Things are made faster now," the automobile manufacturer said, "and people must have more time to use what they make. I can't say just when the shorter working day and week are coming, but they will be here."

Business started to improve, he said, "as soon as people made up their minds to get out and work," and the improvement has continued in spite of a situation in which "everyone is grabbing up all he can get."

Spry, tanned and giving no indication his 71 years were weighing heavily, Ford startled observers by laying one hand on a 4-foot rail and vaulting it.

Aviator's Stunts Give Fire Alarm

Mt. Williams, Va., Home Destroyed by Blaze.

Winchester, Va., June 20 (Spl.).—An unidentified aviator, maneuvering his plane in a peculiar manner, turned in a fire alarm which brought neighbors to the home of Maurice Orndorff, at Mount Williams, it was reported here today. The fire broke out in the Orndorff home while all members of the family, except Miss Grace Orndorff, were away.

The aviator, seeing smoke rising from windows of the residence, put his plane through a series of loop-the-loops, nose dives and other stunts until neighbors were attracted to the place. Neighbors saved a few pieces of furniture.

Coast Guard Hunts Boat.

Gang Holds Up Town; Flees Without Loot

Seven Kidnaped, Used as Shields; Guns Subdue Scores, But Gunmen Leave Safe When They Can't Lift It Into Truck.

Crescent, Okla., June 20 (AP).—Seven gunmen literally captured this town of 1,200 population early today, held scores of alarmed citizens at bay with shotguns while they attempted to make away with a 3-ton bank safe containing $4,200, and then abandoned their efforts and fled with seven or eight residents they kidnaped as shields.

All of the kidnap victims, including a pajama-clad telephone operator and another woman, were released a few miles from Crescent.

Unable to hoist the safe into their truck, the gunmen left it unopened on the sidewalk.

The thugs swarmed down on the town just before dawn, forced their way into the telephone office and disconnected the switchboard, threw a blanket around the pajama-clad telephone girl and dragged her to their motor car.

Then they seized the night cook at a nearby cafe, and tied him up in a baseball park, along with Joe Stanfield, night watchman, who had been made a captive as they entered the city.

Mrs. Rose Cook, who operates a tailor shop, next was seized as she came onto the street after being awakened by the commotion. Two youths also were captured as they approached, and the gunmen, using their victims as shields, methodically began their attempts to steal the safe.

One member of the gang stopped five motorists as they approached on the highway, and lined them up also to serve as shields.

More townspeople, awakened by the noise, ventured out to see what was happening. As they came up, they were lined up at a distance, at the points of sawed-off shotguns, an automatic rifle and a machine gun.

Using the winch on their truck, the bandits swung the huge safe through a plate glass window, then vainly struggled to hoist it on the truck.

As they labored under the light of a street lamp, perspiring and swearing, someone fired a small rifle at them. They replied with blasts from their shotguns, but no one was injured. The shooting brought out almost all the remaining residents. They, too, were lined up.

At the approach of dawn the gunmen, completely stumped in their efforts to load the huge vault, suddenly gave up the attempt, herded their victims into the machine, and fled.

Sheriff Milo Beck, who followed the outlaws for 10 miles before he lost them, said he believed they were intoxicated.

Philadelphia Clew Found To Lost Bride

Police Trace Bank Stock to Quaker City and Trail Husband's Trunks.

New York, June 20 (AP).—The possibility that Miss Agnes Tufverson went to Philadelphia shortly before her mysterious disappearance last December turned the widespread search for the missing woman lawyer to that city late today.

Both the New York police and the New York district attorney's office, working separately, uncovered new evidence which suggested to them that Miss Tufverson may have gone to the Quaker City to consult some man, possibly on business.

"We have learned that Capt. Ivan Poderjay the last time he was seen here told Miss Tufverson's maid she had gone to Philadelphia," Acting Capt. John H. Ayers, head of the Missing Persons Bureau, said.

Bank Stock Traced.

James T. Neary, assistant district attorney, announced that Miss Tufverson on December 15 or 16 gave her Chase National Bank stock to a man in Philadelphia. That man, Neary said, was not Poderjay, who is held in Vienna in connection with his bride's disappearance.

Neary said efforts were being made to learn if Miss Tufverson was registered in any Philadelphia hotel at the time of the transfer, three or four days before she vanished. He declined to disclose the man's identity.

The police also turned their attention again to Poderjay's trunks.

"We have accounted for three trunks and we are at work now tracing a fourth one," said Capt. Ayres.

"We know Miss Tufverson had

Freed Slayer Suspect Guilty on Gun Charge

Kansas City, June 20 (AP).—The Government convicted Charles Gargotta today of possessing stolen pistols, only a few weeks after the State failed in an effort to convict him of murder with the same weapons.

The case against Gargotta involved a gun battle in which Sheriff Thomas B. Bash killed two gangsters, after they had slain Ferris Anthon, a liquor racketeer. Bash said Gargotta started to shoot at him, then tossed away his pistol and begged for mercy.

U. S. Indicts 8 Air Leaders In Tax Case

Government Claims Group Did Not Pay $201,225 on Stock Profit.

St. Louis, June 20 (AP).—Eight leading figures in the aviation industry were indicted by a Federal grand jury today on charges of conspiracy to evade income tax of $201,225.

The indictment charges the defendants—Dan W. Jones, Halsey Dunwoody and George B. Schierberg, of St. Louis, and Graham B. Grosvenor, A. O. Cushy, Frederick J. King, William Dewey Loucks and Alex H. Beard, of New York—caused false returns to be filed in an attempt to evade income tax on a net profit of $2,248,000, which the Universal Aviation Corporation realized in 1929 from the sale of 50,000 shares of capital stock of the Fokker Aircraft Corporation.

Another indictment charging false statements was returned against Dunwoody and Schierberg, signers of the Universal Aviation Corporation's 1929 income tax return.

Stock Juggling Charged.

Jones was president of Universal Aviation at the time Dunwoody was executive vice president and Schierberg was treasurer. The New York men were officers or directors of the Aviation Corporation of New York, a holding company, which in 1929 acquired Universal Aviation.

The basis of the Government's charge is a highly profitable turnover of 50,000 shares of Fokker stock, acquired by Universal Aviation at $8 a share. When the stock shot up on the market, Universal sold it to the Aviation Corporation

Dogged Dog Finds Own Way to the Doctor's Office

Frederick, Md., June 20 (Spl.).—A dog who visited his doctor of his own volition as regularly as a hypochondriacal maiden aunt has been discovered here.

He is Bingo, French bulldog of Mrs. Edward P. Thomas. Several weeks ago Bingo developed a disease of his ear, and his mistress took him to Dr. R. V. Smith, veterinarian. After several visits, Mrs. Smith failed to appear with Bingo.

However, according to Dr. Smith, Bingo continued his daily calls, scratching on the office door and climbing to the operating table, until he was cured completely.

Slender Figure Starvation Hurts Women More Than Men

Berkeley, Calif., June 20 (AP).—Women who fast or starve themselves for the sake of a slender figure do so at a greater risk to their health than do men undergoing similar deprivations, the American Association for the Advancement of Science was told today by Prof. H. J. Deuel.

"Women develop a much more pronounced acidosis during a week's fasting than do men," Prof. Deuel said. "This condition is associated with the inability of females to oxidize fat during starvation as completely as the male subjects are able to do.

"For this reason an accumulation of incompletely oxidized products, which are organic acids, occurs in the female and typical symptoms of acidosis ensue."

Prof. Deuel said experiments on animals may indicate that certain operations might reverse this comparative ability to endure starvation as between the sexes.

"Although none of the ordinary laboratory animals develop an acidosis during fasting comparable with man, nevertheless it was shown that fasting male rats are able to oxidize one of these organic acids—diacetic acid—much more completely than female rats can."

After removal of certain glands, however, his report continued, conditions are reversed and fasting female animals can oxidize as much, if not more, than males.

An analysis of 5,000 persons under 21 years of age made in the parasitical research laboratory of the University of California under the direction of Prof. C. A. Kofoid has disclosed that in all the commoner intestinal ailments there is an increase of the percentage of infections during early childhood.

Hindenburg Backs Nazi Rule Attack

Vice Chancellor Sent Chief Copy of Talk; Ignored Hitler.

Berlin, June 20 (AP).—The position of Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen in his outspoken criticism of certain Nazi policies was greatly strengthened in the view of the German people today by support of the venerable President von Hindenburg.

The President sent a brief telegram of commendation to Von Papen on the speech he delivered last Sunday. Von Hindenburg was given an advance copy of the address to study at his country estate, but Chancellor Hitler was not similarly favored.

Von Papen's opposition to muzzling of the press, his emphasis on dangers of collectivism and his position against the State interfering with religion and other phases of private life are in accord with views of the President, whose personal popularity gives great weight to any position he takes.

Newspaper vendors in Germany were doing a tremendous business today selling Swiss newspapers which carried voluminous extracts from Von Papen's address, which was suppressed in Germany by his fellow minister, Joseph Goebbels, head of the propaganda department.

Von Papen offered to resign from the government, but Hitler flatly refused the resignation. Hitler is understood to have agreed with many of the vice chancellor's criticisms, but to have taken the position that they should not have been made public in the manner they were.

A spokesman for the propaganda ministry said that "Herr von Papen's speech contained formulations which might be properly understood by a small group of intellectuals, who knew, as we do, that Herr von Papen did not mean to undermine the present regime, but rather to stabilize it, but which, when reaching the broad masses, would only lead to unrest."

The ministry said that protests by Nazi editors who threatened to open a "heavy cannonade" upon Von Papen made the suppression necessary.

Berlin, June 20 (U.P.).—Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen departed for Neudeck tonight to confer with President Paul von Hindenburg concerning the uproar into which his sharply critical speech against radical Nazis has thrown Germany.

Von Papen's departure was regarded as a new strategic move in the campaign to control the more radical Nazis and place more power in the hands of the more conservative junker bloc which the vice chancellor domina'es.

Banker's Body Found in Surf

Death of Richmond Man at Resort Blamed on Heart Attack.

Virginia Beach, Va., June 19 (AP).—The lifeless body of Charles Cotsworth Pinckney, Richmond banker, was found floating in the water off Virginia Beach this morning by two young men in a rowboat. They brought the body to shore.

An inhalator squad from the Virginia Beach Police Department was unable to resuscitate the man, whose death is thought to have been caused by a heart attack.

Pinckney arrived at the Beach late yesterday with his wife and chauffeur and intended remaining until Friday, it was said.

Quake Takes Lives In Western Turkey

Death List Undetermined; 8 Germans Entombed.

Istanbul, Turkey, June 20 (AP).—An undetermined number of persons were killed in western Turkey by an earthquake today. The shocks were greatest in the region of Smyrna.

The earthquake was accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain and all communications were interrupted. A cloudburst caused many streams to overflow their banks, inundating a number of villages, while houses were crumbled by the earth shocks.

Beuthen, Germany, June 20 (AP).—An earth tremor felt in upper Silesia at 6 p. m. today entombed seven miners in the Karsten Zentrum pit. Walls were cracked in houses in the town.

Father Cox Proposes Roosevelt as Dictator

New York, June 20 (AP).—Father James R. Cox, Pittsburgh priest who led a march of unemployed on Washington in 1932, said today he favors making the United States Fascist with President Roosevelt as dictaotr.

"It is the only way we will get anywhere," he said as he sailed for Europe on the Manhattan.

Gold Clause Abrogation Act Upheld

St. Louis Federal Judge Declares Constitution Was Not Violated.

Appeal Expected From Decision Which Affects Billions in Securities.

St. Louis, June 20 (AP).—A Federal district judge today placed the stamp of constitutionality upon Congressional action abrogating the "gold clause" of obligations payable in the United States, estimated at $90,000,000,000 to $125,000,000,000.

In upholding the legality of the action, Judge Charles B. Faris, in a 31-page decision, ruled that bonds of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, despite the promise they contain to pay in "gold coin of the United States" of the weight and fineness of the time of their issue, should be paid only at their face value in the money of the United States now current.

The ruling was the first by a Federal court since "public resolution No. 10" was enacted in June, 1933.

Appeal is Expected.

It is expected the case, of wide interest in financial circles, will be appealed to the United States Supreme Court.

After discussing all the points raised in the case, Judge Faris concluded:

"And so it follows, that public resolution No. 10 is in my opinion valid; that the gold clause is therefore unenforceable in the ultimate letter thereof as urged by interveners, and is enforceable in equity only, to the extent that interveners as trustee, are entitled to recover or to be paid on each $1,000 par value bond in controversy the sum of $1,000 in such money of the United States as is now current, or as shall be current when the final decree for payment is entered."

Equivalent of Gold Asked.

The decision was on a petition of the Bankers Trust Co. of New York, trustee for $34,548,000 bonds originally issued by the Iron Mountain Railroad, now a part of the Missouri Pacific System, asking the court to declare the bonds payable in gold of the quality called for on the face of the bonds. Since payment in gold is now impossible, the trustee sought payment in present currency equivalent to the amount of gold called for in the contract, or about $1.693 for each $1,000 bond, which would have increased the original debt from $34,548,000 to about $58,500,000.

Counsel for the Missouri Pacific trustees, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue opposed the petition on the ground the legislation was imperative in view of urgent economic conditions.

Holds Power Rests in Congress.

After going into the history of the case and arguments raised by counsel for and against the gold clause, Judge Faris said:

"Summing up the premises laid down in the beginning, it seems to me impossible to escape these legal conclusions: (a) that in the Congress alone is lodged the power to say what shall be used as money; (b) no person in the Nation has the right to make a contract the effect of which is to nullify, obstruct or circumvent the power of Congress to say what shall be the

$60,000,000 Cuban Loans Held Invalid

Machado Bonds in U. S. Called "Illegitimate."

Havana, June 20 (U.P.).—An official report issued by a commission investigating $60,000,000 American loans to the Machado regime tonight formally declared the loans "illegitimate" and in violation of the constitution and laws of Cuba.

The text added that the loans "made after May 20, 1929, were contracted with a government of usurpation, and to a regime, not to a government. They were all odious and largely contrary to the people's welfare."

The loans were held by American bondholders, the Chase National Bank, the National City Bank of New York, and the Continetal Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago.

Brain Trusters to Stay, Politics Out, Roosevelt Says in Speech at Yale

President Given Degree; Phelps "Ribs" Him at Colorful Affair.

Experiments Stay, Executive Asserts

Ability Only Is Guide to Selection of Aids, He Declares.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

New Haven, Conn., June 20.—President Roosevelt declared at Yale University today that the so-called "Brain Trust" is here to stay.

The Harvard-educated Chief Executive addressed the Yale alumni after receiving an honorary degree of doctor of laws.

Striking anew at critics and their "ribald comment about the use of brains in government," the President belittled the influence of politics in high appointments, complimented Congress, and, near the end, evoked applause with:

"After all, we are—whether we like it or not—living in a democracy. I like it. We are going to continue to live in a democracy."

The President's address, delivered to "fellow Elis" massed before him at a luncheon in the Memorial dining hall, climaxed one of the most colorful commencement exercises in the 233 years' history of the New England university.

Declares Politics "Out."

Concerning the Brain Trust, the President told the alumni and faculty members, "It seems to be a pretty good practice—a practice which will continue—this practice of calling on trained people for tasks that require trained people."

From this he launched into an assertion that ability is behind most Federal appointments. In fact, he added, "I couldn't tell you today the party affiliations of probably the majority of people holding responsible positions in Washington and it is a mighty good thing that I can not."

The Administration's deeply ingrained policy of government by experiment was confirmed by the President, who declared it in step with the Nation's great universities.

Both Harvard and Yale, he proudly exclaimed, are "willing to experiment—thank God!"

Warns of Narrowness.

W- ing against sectionalism and narrowness in point of view, the P dent gave Congress a tribute by indirection. That body represents a better "cross-section of American public opinion," he said, than "any aggregation of educated citizens having purely the local point of view."

Arriving this morning after an overnight trip from Washington, President Roosevelt was greeted by

U. S. Will Buy Cotton, Help Clothe Needy

250,000 Bales Will Be Purchased Out of Surplus Crop.

Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins yesterday announced the Federal Emergency Relief Administration will purchase 250,000 bales of surplus cotton, to be manufactured into articles for the needy unemployed.

Hopkins said the buying program had the double purpose of helping the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's surplus disposition program, at the same time raising the Nation's standards of relief.

Spot cotton closed at 12:20 cents a pound yesterday.

Departing from the customary procedure of having the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation do the buying of surpluses and materials for the needy, Hopkins said that FERA funds would be used. Why

Liquor Board Urges Law Let Dealers Mix 'Em in Plain Sight

Abolition of the regulation which prohibits the mixing of drinks in public view was urged yesterday by the Liquor Control Board in a letter to the District Commissioners.

The board also asks that the time in which bottled liquor may be sold be extended to midnight, instead of the present closing hour of 10 p. m. If this regulation is amended, all off sales will be made uniform. Beer may now be sold until midnight.

The effect of the elimination of the rule regarding mixing drinks in sight of patrons will be to permit the operation of service bars in dining rooms and all places where liquor is sold for consumption on the premises.

Because of the curtailment in the staff of the liquor board, due to a slash made by Congress in the board's budget, Chairman George W. Offutt believes the small staff of inspectors would be unable to keep the proper check on conditions in liquor dispensing establishments.

Fate of the recommendations is in doubt. Commissioner George E. Allen is opposed to any modification of the rules, which would permit any condition resembling the old-time bar room, while Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen is inclined to favor the board's suggestion.

As proposed by the liquor board, abolition of the regulation would not permit the maintenance of bars at which drinks could be consumed.

Use of policemen to check liquor applications was recommended by Commissioner Allen. This assignment was suggested because of the necessity of dismissing six of the Liquor Board inspectors.

Britons Saved From Pirates

Five Taken From English Ship by Chinese Are Rescued.

London, June 20 (U.P.).—All five Britons captured by Chinese pirates from the British steamer Shuntien off the North China coast last Monday have been saved, the admiralty announced tonight.

The communique said dispatches from the commander in chief of British naval forces in Chinese waters reported their rescue. Naval Lieuts. Luce and Field and two men named Brand and Watson, ship's officers on the Shunten, were "safe and well aboard the British destroyer Whitshed," the report added.

The fifth, G. D. Nicholl, a passenger, was safe at Tsinan-Fu, capital of Shantung Province.

Mrs. Dall Fears Her Two Children May Be Kidnaped

Reno, Nev., June 20 (U.P.).—Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, here to divorce Curtis Dall, is assailed with fears for the safety of her children, "Sistie" and "Buzzie," she said today. Mrs. Dall said she feared "some fanatic or kidnaper."

Mrs. Dall refused to amplify her remark. She said the children, grandchildren of President Roosevelt, have virtually recovered from the colds they contracted while en route here. The Lake Tahoe cottage where they are living is guarded constantly.

"We're not taking any chances," Sam Platt, attorney for Mrs. Dall, said.

Brain Trusters Stay, Yale Told By Roosevelt

crowds estimated as high as 50,000. In customary fashion, he rode between thick lanes to the Yale campus, beginning a festive day that ended aboard the yacht Sequoia in Long Island Sound.

Donning the tassled cap and gown of scholarship, the President entered crowded Woolsey Hall on the arm of his son, James, while Mrs. Roosevelt took a place on the front row in the audience. Throughout the exercises, in which 1,100 degrees were conferred, the President faced the throng from the stage.

It was the first visit of a President to Yale since Theodore Roosevelt came to New Haven 33 years ago for a similar degree. Before him, William McKinley and George Washington were the only Chief Executives to receive a degree during office, but their awards were mailed to them.

Phelps Ribs President.

The spectacle was a striking one, enlivened by the humorous introduction of the 12 recipients of honorary degrees by Yale's famed Dr. William Lyon Phelps. As public orator, the English professor spared none of them, least of all the President.

While Mr. Roosevelt stood smilingly awaiting his degree of doctor of laws, Dr. Phelps gravely informed the audience, "Former Presidents have had Congress on their hands; Franklin Roosevelt has Congress in his hands." He continued, with a rare smack:

"Many persons had begun to wonder if it were possible for a National legislature in troublous times to function wisely or indeed to function at all; the principle of democracy was seriously questioned. But the new President had been in office only two weeks when the phrase more often heard in both houses was 'the ayes have it.'

"Things began to happen. The President has done more to make the first page of the newspapers interesting than any other President in time of peace. We do not know what will happen in the next two years; but we do know it will be interesting."

"A Man of Today."

Mr. Roosevelt, continued the Yale professor, is "a man of today," he "flies through the air," "on the radio he is a great artist." Well-named, "he has the energy of Roosevelt and the charm of Franklin," and is unterrified by responsibility.

This high spot of the program, which amused the President and set off tumultuous applause from the throng, was rivaled only by the surprise award of a doctor of laws degree to Dr. Phelps himself. His award, which had been kept a dead secret, was proposed by Gov. William L. Cross and presented by President James Rowland Angell.

After the ceremonies, the President attended the alumni luncheon, sitting under a huge blue Yale flag, and heard Dr. Angell and young President James Bryant Conant of Harvard, his own alma mater, exchange addresses of good-natured rivalry.

Then he drove to the home of Dr. Harvey Cushing, a professor of Yale, joining Mrs. Roosevelt, James Roosevelt and Mrs. James Roosevelt, who is a daughter of the Cushings. Both families then motored to the dock and boarded the Sequoia, on which they will cruise until the Yale-Harvard boat races Friday.

Roosevelt's Speech at Yale

President, Product of Harvard, Praises Both Schools for Contribution of "Brains" to Government; Says Parties and Politics Don't Count.

(Associated Press.)

President Angell and Fellow Elis: I don't believe that any higher academic honor can possibly come to any Harvard graduate than to be made an alumnus of Yale.

I am especially happy because this cements more closely a bond which I have had for many long years with a great number of Yale graduates who have worked with me on many kinds of tasks and in many places. Today in Washington, I count very heavily on the splendid assistance that is given to me by Yale graduates in every department of the Government. We have not yet come to the point of placing universities under the code system. There have been suggestions to that effect, as, for instance, not long ago when some of my friends of Harvard suggested that something should be done to correct the unfair trade practice when a certain sacred ibis disappeared from the Harvard Lampoon office, and again a suggestion was made when a certain pet bulldog disappeared from New Haven.

"Defends" Use of Brains.

It was suggested this morning by the public orator (Prof. Phelps) that Congress will do almost anything I wanted. But the dear, good Congress almost prevented me from being with you today. Last night, when I got aboard the train, I felt just like a school boy out of school, yet here I am, back in academic surroundings. However, I did want to tell you of my appreciation of being able to work through these years with Yale men, and I want to tell you also very simply of my thought that while there has been a certain amount of comment about the use of brains in the National Government, it seems to be a pretty good practice—a practice which will continue—this practice of calling on trained people for tasks that require trained people.

Today, more than ever before in our public life, it is true that we are calling on the teaching profession, on the graduates of scientific schools and other schools, and I think it is also true that in the conduct of government there has been no period in our hsitory where what we call in the wrong sense politics and in the wrong sense politicians enter less than they do today in the conduct of Government. I find, for the sake of example, that in my own mind and, I am quite sure, in the minds of most of the leaders of the Federal Government, qualification from the standpoint of ability rather than from politics enters into most of the choices that are made.

Says Parties Don't Count.

There are, of course, repercussions to that. Sometimes appointments are made and people are called in to serve their country and weeks go by before anybody discovers which party they happen to belong to. I couldn't tell you today the party affiliations of probably the majority of people holding responsible positions in Washington and it is a mighty good thing that I can not.

I go back a great many years in calling on Yale men for help.

One of the most pleasant surprises this morning was the statement by the dean of the school of forestry that this year's graduates were not present because they were already at work, and I looked down at Gifford Pinchot (Governor of Pennsylvania) and smiled and he knew what I meant. Twenty years ago, or more than that, 22 years ago, when I was a youngster in the State Legislature, for some perfectly unknown reason I was made the chairman of a committee—I think it was because nobody else wanted the chairmanship—on forests, fish and game.

It was a subject about which I knew very little. I discovered immediately that one of the problems before us was the denudation of the Adirondacks. Timber had been cut there without rhyme or reason or thought, and many of the upper slopes were being washed away until only the bare rock appeared. I began to take an interest and I sent a letter to the chief forester of the United States, asking him to come to Albany to advise me and the Legislature, and Gifford Pinchot came up there and delivered a professional lecture. He was one of the first of the brain trusters.

Pinchot Sells His Idea.

And the thing that sold it to the layman's mind—to the mind of the average member of the Assembly or the Senate—was not so much what he said as what he showed, photographs of north China, a region once covered with magnificent forests, a region which today is a desert. We passed our legislation and that was the first step toward practical Government supervised forestry so far as I know in the Eastern part of the country. It started me on the conservation road. From that time on, in company with a great many other graduates of Yale, we have gone ahead by the slow process of education until today the whole country, I believe, is thoroughly familiar with the purpose of the great National plan for the better use of land and water throughout our continental limits.

I cite this merely as an example of what may grow from the enthusiasm of men. There are hundreds of other things we are doing today that are new, and the Government of this country is seeking to progress in all of the affairs of governing the country in the same way that the great universities of this country have succeeded because they would never stand still. Harvard and Yale have pointed the way in education for a great many generations and today Harvard and Yale stand out in the world of education as being willing to experiment—thank God!

"We Need Not Worry."

Just so long as that spirit remains in our education, and, as President Conant suggested, we have still quite a way to go to catch up with the seventeenth century, and just so long as that spirit is abroad in education, we need not worry about the future of the Nation.

I want to say one word about the National point of view. Ever since I graduated from college I have been more and more interested in the proposal, today in part a fact, that these great Eastern universities should make themselves National in so far as it lies within their power, and the body of graduates of Yale and the body of graduates of Harvard every year are increasing the useful influence of the two universities in all of the sections of this country. The danger for all of us graduates, especially, I believe of the larger Eastern universities, lies in a narrowness of point of view—the living within the confines of one's own community, of living within one's own profession and of typifying too greatly the man who is described by the West as the man who never went West of the Hudson River. To get to know our country is going to help us, not only individually, but our own Government.

Likes Democracy.

We hear much in the more erudite press of the East about members of the legislative branch of the National Government who are usually set down as "local politicians." And yet in that body we must remember the simple fact that they do represent every State and every Congressional district throughout the length and breadth of the land and that the cross-section of American public opinion is better displayed in the halls of Congress than it is in any aggregation of educated citizens having purely the local point of view. After all, we are—whether we like it or not—living in a democracy. I like it. We are going to continue to live in a democracy.

The fact that the influence of Harvard and Yale is becoming more cosmopolitan and more Nation-wide as each year goes by is one of the finest things to which we can point and the effort that we lend to that end one of the finest things we can do for our alma mater.

So, my friends, because Harvard and Yale have gone through these centuries hand in hand, I am very happy to belong to both of them.

Tugwell, wearing a white linen suit, was sworn in without special ceremony to the new post for which he was confirmed by the Senate last week after being questioned by members of the Senate Agriculture Committee as to his qualifications, and economic views. He was opposed by some on the ground that he was not a dirt farmer.

This objection probably would not stand against M. L. Wilson for the post of Assistant Secretary as he has spent most of his life on farms or teaching agriculture at Montana State Agricultural College.

Casket Customers To Foot the Bill For Cost of Code

Casket customers numbering 1,151,172 will be required this year to meet the funeral supply industry's code authority cost budget, approved yesterday by Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

The basis of assessment is on sales figures for 1933 and aggregates $145,740.

Funeral directors are to pay 15 cents each on 1,058,956 caskets. Jobbers are assessed 10 cents each on 92,216 caskets.

There is allowance in the budget for uncollectable bills.

will pay no more than $1.10 an hour.

Standing to lose thousands of dollars after having figured the projects on close margins, the PWA contractors are preparing a petition for submission to the Board of Labor Review, it was learned.

Woods Awaits Protest.

Herbert Woods, assistant to the board, said last night he had not yet received the protest but expected it in a day or two. The petition will ask that union carpenters be required to work for $1.10 an hour, in accordance with PWA regulations, or, if the workmen refuse, that the Federal Government make up the difference.

This is the puzzler, one which may have to go to the courts for settlement.

Last summer an agreement was signed by representatives of the Public Works Administration and organized labor setting the minimum wage rate for skilled building trades mechanics in the District of Columbia at $1.10 an hour.

"It is further agreed," says section 2, "that in the event the prevailing hourly rate . . . on April 30, 1933, shall be above the minimum set for any district within that zone, such agreed wage rate shall be the rate to be paid for building employes on building construction projects financed from funds appropriated by the administrator of public works under the authority of the national industrial recovery act."

Bids Made on $1.10 Rate.

The prevailing rate for carpenters on April 30, 1933, was $1 but, in conformity with section 2, those working on PWA projects have been paid $1.10. Bids on the warehouse addition, library annex and other work affected were made on that basis.

At the carpenters-employers strike settlement meeting in Commissioner George E. Allen's office Tuesday, a representative of the Walter Kidde Co. told William L. Hutcheson, president of the union, his concern would lose $35,000 if compelled to pay the $1.25 scale.

Hutcheson is authoritatively reported to have told the contractor his men would not, regardless, continue on the $1.10 basis on PWA jobs now that they have received an increase to $1.25.

Signing of the $1.25 agreement Tuesday in Allen's office, ending the carpenter's strike, was not witnessed by the delegation of PWA contractors. They came to the meeting but left early, lest even their presence be interpreted as making them a party to the contract.

Those involved include, besides the Kidde Co., John McShain, Inc., which is erecting the Congressional Library annex and Internal Revenue addition, the Consolidated Engineering Co., on the chemistry building at Howard University, and the Herzog Co., at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Plasterers Call Meeting.

The Charles H. Tompkins Co., a local concern affiliated with the Master Builders Association, also holds PWA contracts, including a marble terrace at the U. S. Public Health Service Building and a chapel and warehouse-garage at Fort Myer.

The carpenters' new wage agreement was negotiated with the Master Builders Association.

Simultaneously with the cropping out of this new labor complication, indications of an early settlement of the plasterers' strike was borne on the announcement that a meeting will be held today to reach an agreement.

Union plasterers struck six weeks ago, demanding a 30-hour week and $1.75 an hour. Under their old contract, which has expired, they received $1.50 on a 40-hour-week basis. The meeting will be held at 1:30 p. m. in the office of the Employing Plasterers Association, 2539 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, said Frank J. Murphy, secretary. Wage committees of both sides will attend.

Union Dispute Aired in Court

Two Groups of Workers Claim "Acoustical" Stone Jobs.

The dispute between the Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers International Association and the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union of America as to which guild shall install "acoustical" stone in three Government buildings was heard in the District Supreme Court yesterday. A decision is expected today.

The association is asking that the Bricklayers Union be enjoined from disrupting an agreement entered into by both sides several years ago. The agreement provided that all "acoustical" stone work be divided between the two groups.

Despite that, the association contended the bricklayers were threatening to call off their men from jobs where they did not get the entire work of installation.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue spent most of yesterday listening to attorneys outline the disputed angles. For the association, Attorneys Charles S. Baker and B. L. Tepper placed three witnesses on the stand, while Attorney William E. Leahy, acting for the bricklayers, confined his efforts to cross-examination.

Thirty witnesses have been subpenaed.

New York, June 20 (U.P.).—Philip de Ronde, Paraguayan consul, complained against cars being parked in front of his Park avenue home. Police tagged the only automobile in sight, and it was the consul's. The court suspended sentence "as an international courtesy."

Supreme Court Faces Task of Speeding Law

Must Draft Uniform Rules of Procedure for All State Tribunals.

(Associated Press.)

The Supreme Court may call on some of America's outstanding lawyers to help unravel legal kinks and speed up legal procedure.

An enormous task fell on the high tribunal yesterday as the result of a bill signed by President Roosevelt Tuesday. It empowers the court to lay down uniform rules of practice and procedure for all Federal courts.

The President called it a "most important" move, and other observers saw in it an opening wedge toward making all legal procedure State as well as Federal—more uniform and simple. For generations there have been complaints that the courts are hamstrung with technicalities and delay.

In drafting rules same years ago for the guidance of Federal courts in equity suits, the court named a commission of legal lights. It was thought probable that it will follow the same procedure now.

The job may keep it busy for months. For years opposition prevented Congress from seeking uniformity. Hitherto the rules followed in Federal courts have broadly been those observed in the various State courts. Opposition to uniformity came from influential lawyers who were afraid that Federal rules might be materially different from those of State courts in which they practiced.

Court Upholds Abrogation of Gold Clause

St. Louis Federal Judge Says Constitution Was Not Violated.

National money, or medium of exchange; (c) every person who enters into a contract is, in law conclusively deemed to hold in contemplation the power of Congress to alter and change the nature and so-called value of the medium of exchange, or money of the Nation; (d) no law passed by Congress can be invalid when it does no more than carry out a power vested by the Constitution in the Congress, and (e) subsequent valid laws have rendered strict performance of the gold clause value legally impossible."

Decision Gratifies U. S. Fiscal Chiefs

Administration fiscal officials were gratified but hardly surprised yesterday at a Federal court upholding the constitutionality of the act by which the United States officially quit the gold standard, the Associated Press reported.

The measure was rushed through Congress at the urging of the Administration at the special session a year ago. Its principal effect was to make all debts payable in legal tender, regardless of gold payment specifications in bonds and contracts.

Previously, President Roosevelt had decreed it illegal to hold gold in quantities of more than $100 to a person and had declared an embargo on gold exports, so that foreign obligations could not be met with the metal.

Was Already a Fact.

Thus the Nation had already left the gold standard to all intents and purposes. Mr. Roosevelt said he regarded the legislation as merely a legal record of an accomplished fact, and Secretary Woodin described it as intended to remove confusion as to the legal position of debtors and creditors.

Conservative Republicans in the Senate made the measure the target of one of their first attacks on Roosevelt policies. They denounced it as repudiation by the Government of its obligation to redeem many Government bonds in gold.

The resolution recited that:

"Whereas the holding of or dealing in gold affects the public interest, and are therefore subject to proper regulation and restrictions; and Emergency Was Cited.

"Whereas the existing emergency has disclosed that provisions of obligations which purport to give the obligee a right to require payment in gold or in a particular kind of coin or currency of the United States, or in an amount of money of the United States measured thereby, obstruct the power of the Congress to regulate the value of the money of the United States and are inconsistent with the declared policy of the Congress to maintain at all times equal power of every dollar, coined or issued by the United States in the markets and in the payment of debts.

"Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled that

"Every provision contained in or made with respect to any obligation which purports to give the obligee a right to require payment in gold or a particular kind of coin or currency, or in money of the United States measured thereby, is declared to be against public policy; and no such provision shall be contained in or made with respect to any obligation hereafter incurred."

The measure had been upheld in several State courts, but yesterday's decision was the first Federal court verdict sustaining its constitutionality.

U. S. Indicts Eight On Income Charge for $53 a share for a net profit of $2,248,000.

An issue in controversy is the time of consummation of the sale. The Government alleges it took place May 16, 1929, and that the profit was subject to income tax for that year. As reported by the companies, however, the transaction showed no tax liability, because on August 1, 1929, Aviation Corporation acquired 95 per cent of Universal stock, and if the sale of stock took place in September, as alleged by the defendants, it was an intercompany transaction not subject to tax.

The Government asserts Loucks, a New York lawyer, wrote a letter to Grosvenor saying:

"Please follow out the direction I have given and it will save us $225,000, and don't let any fool lawyer interfere in it."

The statutory penalty for the offense charged is two years in prison or a fine of $10,000, or both.

Harry C. Blanton, United States District Attorney, said today that George H. Moore, former internal revenue collector here, visited him in New Madrid, Mo., last Thursday and told him "Washington was very much interested in having the tax case reconsidered by the grand jury," which at that time had voted the indictment.

Moore, Blanton said, told him Basil O'Connor, former law partner of President Roosevelt, was a close friend of the man involved and wished that the matter should not be pushed.

Miss Perkins Starts Steel Peace Efforts

Sends Workers' Proposal for Settlement to Employers.

Negotiations to settle the threatened steel strike and to get workers and employers into agreement on fundamental unionism issues will be under way within the next few days, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins indicated yesterday.

Acting under authority conferred upon her by President Roosevelt, the Labor Secretary forwarded to the Iron and Steel Institute the proposal advanced to the President Tuesday by the executive committee of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

Donald Richberg, NRA general counsel, who talked with steel industry representatives in New York Tuesday about the employes' proposal, said:

'I see no reason why a satisfactory adjustment can not be made."

Confers With Leaders.

The Labor Secretary said she had not yet heard from the Institute in reply to the workers.

"There has been no conference arranged for the next 24 hours," she said.

Miss Perkins conferred yesterday with Richberg and Senator Robert Wagner, of the National Labor Board, on the steel situation, and also discussed the general labor picture with them. She said she had received a "confidential" report from the NRA counsel.

Although declining to express her personal views on the Amalgamated proposal, Miss Perkins said she had forwarded it to the Steel Institute "in a formal letter of transmittal." She said she also had talked to institute representatives and to Amalgamated committee members by telephone.

"There is no deadlock," Miss Perkins said. "I have not heard any response from the institute nor have they sent me any proposal. Naturally we gave the institute an opportunity to say anything it desires."

Reticent on Progress.

Carefully guarding her utterances, the Cabinet's sole woman member asserted it was no tup to her to talk about details of what steel workers and their employers were thinking. "There's no use having a family quarrel with the neighbors listening," she said.

It wats plainly indicated by Miss Perkins that she expects the institute to come forward soon with a proposal. Whether it would parallel tthat of the workers, she refused to say. Whether a board to settle the issue might be appointed by the President under the new labor bill, she said was entirely up to Mr. Roosevelt.

In addtion to expressing willingness to receive the steel employers, Miss Perkins said she would grant a hearing to representatives of the Steel and Metal Workers Union. She said this organization, through Patrick J. Cush, whom the Secretary met when she was denied a place to speak to a group of so-called radicals last summer at Homestead, Pa., had requested a hearing on the steel situation.

Discuss Labor Bill.

Miss Perkins said also that she, Richberg and Senator Wagner had conducted "exploratory" discussions on the new labor bill authorizing boards to mediate labor issues. This was done to have definite suggestions ready for President Roosevelt when he returns as to how the new conciliation agency can be operated.

As to how the board plan might work out, Miss Perkins said: "Congress gave the President the power and he will exercise it in the public interest."

U. S. to Buy Cotton, Help Clothe Needy

this change was made was not explained.

The cotton is to be manufactured into mattresses, ticking, sheets, pillowcases and clothing and distributed to families on relief rools, the administrator said.

Although no details were given as to how the cotton is to be manufactured, Hopkins' announcement said the plan, among other things, would "help unemployment." The possibility existed that the idle factory plan reported to be under study by the FERA might be utilized to manufacture finished products.

Although last week when The Post published a report that the Administration was looking into the practicability of using idle factories for manufacture of articles for relief distribution, qualified denials were issued. Hopkins admitted yesterday State relief officials had been requested to explore the possibility of such a program.

Purchase of $15,000,000 worth of cotton undoubtedly will affect the cotton market, observers said last night.

Hopkins is known to be somewhat concerned about the small amounts of money given families on relief. Driving at raising relief standards, he was confronted with rising costs, and is believed to have reached a decision to utilize surplus cotton to achieve his goal with minimum expenditure of direct relief payments.

French Court Backs Hollywood Practice

The heirs had protested the film version, in which the part of Nana was played by Anna Sten, as "idiotic, naive and nothing like the original book."

Bottom Torn Open.

The crew was ordered to leave the ship when she was obviously in imminent danger of sinking. A change of the wind to the south, observers said, would swing her nose off the beach and sink her. Her bottom is believed to be completely torn open.

Once the panic caused by violent listing of the huge vessel had subsided, the work of debarking proceeded rapidly. Many of the passengers were taken off by the ship's lifeboats and others by the Norwegian steamer Kong Harold and several packet boats which arrived upon the scene shortly after the accident, summoned by radio calls for assistance.

The captain succeeded in putting the liner into a bay on Karmoey Island, running her close inshore. The passengers who remained aboard and 360 members of the crew were landed on the island without much difficulty.

The passengers were taken by motor as soon as possible to different parts of the island, which is well populated. They will remain there for the present.

Salvage Boats Stand by.

Salvage boats were standing by the Dresden and a French warship in Stavanger Harbor was prepared to assist if necessary.

Later in the evening the captain and some members of the crew returned to the vessel, but not for long as she had a list of 40 degrees.

They reported the bows lying very low and a big hole in the port side. Water was in three holds and in the stokeroom.

If the Dresden is not washed off the ground where her bow rests and sunk, there is a possibility she may turn completely over during the night.

It was reported, but not confirmed, that two Norwegian pilots were aboard the vessel at the time of the accident, one of them on the navigating bridge.

The Dresden was off Haugesund this morning, before the crash, and had planned to make the trip to Hardanger but found this impossible owing to fog. Later she turned southward to Rytylke fjord and suffered the mishap on her return journey.

Hole Torn in Dresden's Bottom by Hidden Rock

New York, June 20 (AP).—Mackay Radio said late today it had picked up an S O S sent out by the German steamship Dresden. "It reported something about a hole in her bottom, but that is all we have now," those in charge of the office said.

Later the Mackay office gave the following report:

"At 2:37 p. m., E. S. T., the North German Lloyd steamer Dresden reported she tore a hole in bottom and asked immediate assistance. She was 5 miles north of Hvidingso on the west coast of Norway.

"Assistance being given by salvage boats from Stavanger.

"Hamburg-American Monta Rosa, position, 57:30 north and 7 east and French steamer Captain Armand, position 59:30 north and 2:30 east, also on way.

Plan to Beach Ship.

"At 3:12 p. m., E. S. T., the Dresden reported her firerooms 1, 2 and 3 flooded and planned to beach the ship.

The Dresden, a vessel of 14,690 gross tonnage, was built at Bremerhaven, Germany, in 1914 by the Vulken Works.

First it was called the Ormuz. Then it became known as the Zeppelin, and finally as the Dresden.

The Dresden, on a run from the continent, arrived at Koperick, Norway, May 30.

Bought From British Firm.

The vessel was completed while the World War was under way. At the end of the conflict it was awarded, on the reparations account, to Great Britain and was operated by the Orient Steam Navigation Co. The North German Lloyd company later purchased it from the English firm, and it returned to German registry.

Thoroughly reconditioned, the Dresden lately has been making cruises between Bremen and Mediterranean Seaports.

The vessel is 570 feet long, 67 feet wide and has a draught of 31 feet. Bulkhead doors divide the ship into a number of watertight compartments.

The Dresden for a number of years had been in transatlantic service between Bremen and New York. The vessel had accommodations for about 1,000 passengers, 400 in the cabin class.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

New Haven, Conn., June 20.—Sharing honors with President Roosevelt, and scientific and literary leaders, Duncan Phillips, Washington art patron, today was awarded an honorary degree of master of arts by Yale University.

Clew to Lost Bride Is Found In Philadelphia

two trunks and that after the wedding at the Little Church Around the Corner Poderjay brought a third to Miss Tufverson's apartment. We know definitely that the truck man carried four trunks to the dock. We have learned where Poderjay bought a fourth trunk, but we have not been able yet to trace that trunk from the purchasing place to the apartment.

"We are trying to find out, too, from the English customs how many trunks Poderjay had when he arrived there."

Poderjay's Cabin Examined.

Capt. Ayres said, after conferring with officials of the White Star Line, he had found that Poderjay's cabin in the tourist section of the Olympic had an outside porthole.

"I asked the official 'if anything should be put through that porthole it would be just too bad, wouldn't it.'

"The official said, 'There'd be nothing to stop it but the bottom of the sea.'"

Capt. Ayres said he had learned from British sources that Poderjay was "a spellbinder with the women" and that he frequently had borrowed large sums of money from them.

Meanwhile, the day brought two European developments in the case:

1. Vienna police chemists reported stains on Poderjay's baggage were not blood.

2. An autopsy on the torso found in Brighton, England, definitely eliminated the possibility of its identification as Miss Tufverson's body.

Body Sought Near N. Y.

A "special attention—urgent" dispatch on the Five-State Teletype System urged police of up-State New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Massachusetts to report at once the discovery of any body resembling Miss Tufverson, whose description was broadcast.

Police officials admitted they lacked sufficient evidence to justify taking any action against Poderjay. A decision on sending detectives to Vienna for questioning of the Yugoslavian adventurer hinged on turning up something tangible, probably discovery of a body.

Police interest in Poderjay's luggage resulted from the discovery that he arrived in this country with only one trunk but carried four aboard the ship on which he sailed. Three of these were taken to the vessel's hold but Poderjay insisted on keeping the fourth in his cabin.

The fourth trunk was described by police as "deep enough to hold a body."

Foulois Maps Reply to House Ouster Report

Cummings Starts Probe Into War Property Fraud Charges.

(Associated Press.)

Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of Air Corps, began last night preparation of a formal reply to charges made by the House Military Sub-committee in a report recommending his dismissal.

Secretary of War Dern, after receiving the subcommittee's report, made a preliminary study of the charges and then referred the document to Foulois.

At the same time, the Justice Department stepped into the threatened expose of fraud in the management of War Department property.

Attorney General Cummings named a special assistant to view evidence collected by the House Military Committee surrounding the lease of an old Army base at port Newark, N. J., which the Mercur Corporation turned into a warehouse. The agreement between the War Department and the Government binds the Mercur Corporation to pay $1 a year for the use of the property and 95 per cent of profits. It was purchased from Newark for war purposes for $11,000,000.

Testimony was given the House committee that the Government received but $1 a year for the use of the property and that there were no profits to divide.

Cummings assigned Harry B. Fleharty, special assistant connected with the land division of the department, and two expert accountants to revie wthe findings of the House sub-committee.

The sub-committee's report held the entire operation has been fraught with "mismanagement, fraud and collusion."

Representative McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the House Military Committee, reported O. V. Kessler, senior auditor for the War Department and civilian representative for Mercur, had paid out of the corporation, "as they admit in their letter of August 23, 1932, the total sum of $24,689" for entertainment of Army officers and others at baseball games and night clubs.

The testimony showed the expenditures to and through Kessler had been approved by Acting Secretary of War F. H. Payne on October 31, 1932, after having been judged illegal by the inspector general and judge advocate general.

French Airmen Go Sightseeing

Rossi and Codos Get a Pedestrian View of Capital.

Capt. Maurice Rossi and Lieut. Paul Codos, the French aces who recently flew the Atlantic from Paris to New York, yesterday took a pedestrian view of Washington.

They arrived yesterday morning from New York in a commercial plane and were entertained at luncheon by Jules Henry, charge d'affaires of the French Embassy. They left for New York at 6 o'clock.

After luncheon and before a cocktail party given in their honor by Maj. Norbert Champsaur, air attache of the embassy, they strolled about the streets of Washington.

"C'est epatant!" (it's swell), said Capt. Rossi. Both fliers paid a Memorial Day visit to Washington, during which they offered their respects to the White House and received congratulations for their achievement. They will sail for France June 23 on the S. S. Champlain.

New Theme Song of NRA: 'Pal, Can You Spare a Match?'

One Pad of Lights to One Cigar—and No More—Says Ruling.

Only one pad of matches may be given away with each cigar purchased, the NRA ruled yesterday.

Despite the recovery unit's recently announced policy to ban price-fixing where possible, Recovery Administrator Johnson explained an emergency existed and that cigar manufacturers would be permitted to set retail prices.

The match-limitation clause reads:

"The retailer may give not more than one pad of matches for each unit sold, or five pads per box of 25 cigars, or ten pads per box of 50 cigars sold."

Johnson announced he had approved a code for the wholesale tobacco code and that President Roosevelt has signed pacts for the cigar-manufacturing industry and the retail-tobacco trade. All three agreements contain a cigar-merchandising plan.

A prime object of the plan, Johnson added, will be to retain the 5-cent cigar.

"The sale of 'long shot' cigars," he explained, "induced by excessive discounts to distributors, has been an abuse of consumers which will be remedied by provisions limiting such discounts. This plan will permit each manufacturer to make the best possible cigar in each price class."

Manufacturers will be permitted to post retail prices and allow the following discounts: To retailers, other than chain stores, a discount not exceeding 28 per cent; to accredited cigar jobbers, an additional discount not exceeding 14 per cent; to cigar service jobbers, a discount not exceeding 66 2-3 per cent, and to chain stores, discounts not exceeding those for accredited jobbers.

"Dumbbells" Can't See—and That Goes Double for Critics

This Will "Open Your Eyes" on Whole Question.

Cambridge Mass. (AP).—Eight pinholes in a piece of cardboard are proving that some cases of supposed dumbness merely are unsuspected poor eyesight.

The pinholes form the crux of a new eye-testing device. They reveal how a visual image looks in the brain. When the image from each eye falls upon the retina, if sight is perfect, the images appear to lie one directly on top of the other.

Actually the two images may have various differences. One may be wider than the other, or taller, or bigger in all dimensions, or smaller. The technical name for this condition is dyslexia. It is sometimes exceedingly difficult to detect, particularly when the faulty image is wrong at only one angle, which may have any direction.

The new device has revealed cases of dyslexia in individuals whose eyesight had not been under suspicion. It is described to the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Walter F. Dearborn and Forrest D. Comfort, of Harvard University. They credit the pioneer work to Prof. Ames and staff of Dartmouth Medical School.

The eight pinholes are set in a circle around a hole three-eighths of an inch in diameter. Behind the pinholes are a series of tiny lights and a series of black backgrounds.

These are arranged so that when a person looks at the large central hole his right eye sees the tiny lights behind the pinholes. But the left eye does not see these lights at all. Instead, it sees only the black backgrounds.

The result is that one eye sees a hole surrounded by black dots, while the other sees the same hole surrounded by pin points of light. If vision is perfect, the black dots and the glowing points superimpose and to the brain they appear to fuse.

But if there is any of the distortion of dyslexia, black dots and the bright points separate. They separate in the direction in which the vision is faulty, whether it is at one angle or a general distortion.

Lenses are placed in front of the eyes until dots and points of lights fuse and that gives the correct prescription for corrective eyeglasses.

U. S. Aids Move For Improved Living Scale

(Associated Press.)

The United States will throw its influence behind a move to raise the world's standard of living and thus assist the recovery drive here.

A resolution sped through the House on adjournment day at the desire of President Roosevelt, makes the United States a member of the international labor organization at Geneva.

President Roosevelt plans to use the membership in drafting the vast program of social improvement he will submit to the next Congress. Supporters of the resolution also say it is expected to assist the Administration in its new reciprocal trade policy.

The resolution, introduced by Representative McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee, and Senator Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, already had been approved by the Senate before the House passed it. Only the executive's signature is needed to make it law.

Mass of Data Available.

By joining the organization, McReynolds said, the United States would acquire a mass of information on social problems gathered since before the World War. It is to be used in formulating the President's program designed to guarantee economic security through unemployment insurance, old-age pensions and other means.

Four delegates, two representing the Government, one labor and one industry, will be sent to Geneva to attend conventions which will seek to have all nations adopt the 40-hour work week, eliminate child labor, prohibit forced labor, raise wages and improve working conditions.

McReynolds, chairma nof the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said low wages and living standards in other countries made it difficult for the United States to combat such competition in world markets. Influencing others to adopt higher standards would increase those here, he said.

Buying Power a Factor.

"Low wages in other countries and other inferior standards of living, decrease purchasing power and make the demand for the products of American agriculture and other industry in other countries less than should be the case. On both of these grounds, accordingly, the success of the Administration's program of recoprocal trade would be definitely enhanced in proportion as standards of living in other countries may be leveled up so as to approach rising standards of living in the United States.

"We can not control the economic practices of other countries but we can influence them by active participation in the organization."

The resolution specifically prohibits the United States from becoming connected with the World Court or the League of Nations by joining the labor organization.

Unused for several years, the vacated factory buildings were being wrecked. A spark from a wrecker's blow-torch, firemen believed, caused the blaze.

Loans, Relief, Phone Control Bills Approved

President Signs Three Important Measures Before Leaving.

(Associated Press.)

Three bills vitally affecting the high and lowly of the Nation were included in a large batch of measures signed by President Roosevelt before leaving on his trip to New England.

The White House yesterday announced that in addition to other measures, the Chief Executive had affixed his name to the loans to industry bill, second deficiency bill making huge relief appropriations and the measure placing a commission in control of the Nation's communications system.

The industrial loans measure, subject of a protracted dispute in Congress which once threatened the measure in conference, makes $580,000,000 available for five-year advances to large and small business enterprises.

Industrial Loan Bill.

It authorizzes, but does not direct, the Treasury to turn $138,000,000 over to the Federal Reserve Banks to which they will add $276,000,000 for loans through other financial institutions, with the latter assuming 20 per cent of the risk.

In addition, the new law authorizes the Reconstruction Corporation to lend up to $300,000,000 direct to industry, with one borrower limited to $500,000, and to lend a maximum of $75,000,000 to school districts and $25,000,000 to drainage districts.

The deficiency bill is next to the second largest appropriation bill to be enacted in peace time. It provides $2,629,500,000 for relief purposes, public building construction and to meet unexpected needs of the Government in the closing days of the present fiscal year.

It calls for a direct Treasury outlay of $1,879,500,000, supplemented by $750,000,000 from the Reconstruction Corporation, with $500,000,000 of the latter item devoted to relief and the remainder to public works.

The Administration originally asked authority to spend all unused Treasury, reconstruction and public works funds for relief, but Congress balked. The House struck out the general Treasury grant and the Senate restricted the reconstruction money so to be used to $500,000,000.

Relief Demands Met.

Democratic leaders estimated the bill made available enough money to meet all the relief needs of the Government for the next eight months, or until well after the next session of Congress convenes.

The communications bill establishes a commission of seven to regulate all wire and radio facilities used in interstate commerce and supercede the Radio Commission that has been functioning since 1927.

The measure outlaws interlocking directorates among such companies, as a blow at the creation of huge telephone monopolies, an dgives the commission authority to grant or veto acquisitions of the lines of other companies or extension of those already owned.

The commission is authorized to make inquiries into many phases of the business involved and report back to Congress with a view to additional legislation.

Navy Adopts Unit Passage Rule at Canal

(Copyright, 1934, by United Press).

The United States Fleet will pass through the Panama Canal always as a unit hereafter, to avoid the possibility of division of the Naval Force by accidental or other damage to the waterway, the United Press was informed authoritatively tonight.

Secretary of Navy Claude A. Swanson announced the fleet would return to the West Coast November 1. Officers will try to lower the 47-hour transit time record set when the fleet entered the Atlantic this spring. Thereafter it will be based in the Pacific.

Admiral David F. Sellers, who has just relinquished fleet command, made the original proposal for unit-transit of the canal. He wanted the fleet to go through on a war basis to establish future policy. From the experience in that planned maneuver, Navy has decided on the unit passage, with merchant vessels excluded during the operation.

Precautionary Measure.

It is emphasized that Naval officers do not anticipate damage to the fleet or to the canal, but that as a precautionary measure the unit movement will be a permanent policy.

Swanson refused to say the fleet would be maintained as a unit "indefinitely." United Press inquiry, however, obtained authortative information that hereafter the fleet always will pass through the canal as a unit.

"The danger at the Panama Canal is division of the fleet," the United Press was informed.

To Protest Sea Force.

If the fleet were dvided at the canal, either accident or sabotage could separate and crepple the sea force. Weeks would be required to reunite the warsips by voyages around Cape Horn.

Departure of the naval force for the Eastward passage did not clear the Pacific of armed American vessels. A group of submarines under Rear Admiral Sinclair Gannon unobstrusively moved north to the Aleutian Islands when the main body of the fleet was steaming to the Canal Zone. It would appear that Atlantic and Pacific ports will have constant protection by undersea craft.

The official explanation of Gannon's cruise to the Aleutians—which extend in a scimitar curse from the mainland of Alaska toward Japan—is that a survey was under way and had to continue uninterrupted. Accompanying the submarines was a detachment of mine layers.

Black to Quit August 1 Unless Appeals Win

President's Trip to Hawaii May Keep Reserve Chief on Job.

(Associated Press.)

Gov. Eugene Black of the Federal Reserve Board is planning to leave his post by August 1 unless President Roosevelt persuades him to stay longer.

Black, who took the job with the understanding his task would be temporary, has been intending all along to get out after the adjournment of Congress. The President's plan for a Hawaiian cruise was considered among the reasons dictating postponement of a change in Reserve Board leadership at this time.

Reports that former Gov. Cox of Ohio might take the post were not regarded seriously in Treasury quarters. It was pointed out that Cox, besides having extensive private interests requiring his attention, has declared himself opposed to taking any prominent Government post.

Speculation over a successor to Black has brought into prominence the names of Tom K. Smith, St. Louis banker, who was until recently a Special Assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury in charge of banking. He was tendered the second highest Treasury post, that of Undersecretary, but refused.

Dog Licenses Expire Soon; Warning Given

All dog licenses issued July 1, 1933, expire June 30, Poundmaster Smith announced yesterday. Smith, however, will give dog owners a few days grace if their pets have been licensed properly heretofore. The muzzle regulation for all dogs out-of-doors and not on leash was emphasized.

"Be watchful of symptoms of rabies in your dog these hot days," warned Smith. Unmuzzled dogs eventually find their way to the pound, he cautioned.

More than 600 delegates, representing 80 companies, answered the roll call of the secretary, George R. Lindsay, of Hagerstown. After much discussion, the report of the president, E. R. Raney, of Kensington, was accepted, but the recommendations attached were left open for argument tomorrow morning. Raney stressed more fire education for firemen, and called upon fire chiefs to promote interest in the fire college at the University of Maryland. Annapolis and Hagerstown were complimented for winning first and second place in the National Fire Association's campaign. Raney stated that he had traveled over 3,000 miles in the interest of legislation for the relief of firemen.

Greetings from the Delaware Firemen's Association were brought to the convention by S. C. Pierce, president, who urged the firemen to stay within the law driving trucks to fires, thereby reducing accidents. Chief James W. Ladies' Auxiliary units held their opening meeting in the session room of the Rescue Fire Company. Mrs. Mary Fainter, president, advised members to vote for the candidates who help firemen obtain necessary legislation.

Firemen honored members who died during the past year in a memorial service conducted by the Rev. James W. Minter, association chaplain, of Baltimore. Burden of Proof Placed on Police In Bootleg Places

Richmond, June 20 (Spl.).—The burden of proof lies on the arresting officer in cases involving the transportation of less than a gallon of bootleg whisky in Virginia, under the interpretation of the State alcoholic beverage control law.

Commenting on decisions in corporation court at Norfolk yesterday, in which four persons charged with possession of illegal whisky were freed, Maj. R. B. Jordan, chief of police, said it is up to the arresting officer in such cases to prove the liquor was purchased illegally.

He said no one has requested an official opinion on the issue.

Druggists Hear Leader Assail Code Drafters

Dr. Johnson Dubs NRA Officers "Misfits" and "Damn Fools."

Baltimore, June 20 (Spl.).—Vigorously assailing the NRA code for the retail drug industry, Dr. L. V. Johnson, of St. Michaels, Md., president of the Maryland Pharmaceutical Association, today declared the druggists themselves should have been allowed to design the code, instead of the "bright young men" in Washington who drafted it.

Dr. Johnson addressed the opening session of the annual convention of the State Phamacists, here last night.

"From the beginning the New Deal has been most successful in giving employment to the most amazing bunch of misfits, freak experts, ballyhoo slingers and plain damn fools, constituting the NRA in Washington, that ever was assembled in one place at one time since the days of Noah," Dr. Johnson said. "If the NRA is to continue, it needs a big dose of horse sense, business judgment and less bluff and nonsense. I am certain that business men could have done a fine job. The plan followed so far is about as foolish as sending a plumber to repair a delicate watch. The business life of the country has been bumped out of gear, Put business men on the job; let them know the job is theirs, and let them alone until the job is done.

"Stop hammering with so-called brilliant ideas. Let them forget the AAA, the consumers' board and other trouble-makers. All that they have done so far is to throw a monkey wrench into the machinery. Put business men, men with real business experience, men with a stake in business, in charge of the NRA. If not, it will wind up in the ash can.

"As I see this picture, the great business interests of the country have been taken for a ride. In the plainest kind of language, we have been gypped. We were denied a retail drug code, written and presented by pharmacists who know a lot about pharmaceutical problems. The views of experience kicked aside to give play to the experiments of the bright young men who swarmed through NRA halls like the locusts in the land of Egypt. In the plainest kind of language again, these bright young men know absolutely nothing about the drug business and, I'm inclined to feel, care nothing about it."

Brain Savant Holds Brown's Case Hopeless

Attack Victim Will Never Reveal Foe, Specialist Says.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 20 (Spl.).—Milton J. Brown, 24-year-old victim of the Battlefield Park attack which cost the life of his sweetheart, Miss Fannie Kurz, will never be able to reveal the identity of the mysterious slayer, in the judgment of Dr. C. C. Coleman, well known Richmond brain specialist, who was called from Richmond yesterday to examine Brown.

Although Brown has not been questioned for a week regarding the mysterious attack which occurred in the darkness of the Battlefield Park woods one month ago tonight, he continues to maintain the story he was assaulted by a man from North Carolina, whom he knew by sight as a customer at the filling station where he works, but whose name he has never known.

The last time he was questioned, he stated he and Miss Kurz drove to the park road, they stopped in the cut-in where they were in the habit of parking and saw a car containing two men and a woman. The man, according to Brown's story, said he was having trouble with the tire. As Brown bent over to look, the man struck him with a tire wrench.

Department of Justice agents have made every effort to locate the mysterious North Carolinian, but have been unable to get any further on this lead than Brown's story.

Youth Assumes Blame in Auto Killing of Pair

Statement Clears Friends and Says He Was Intoxicated.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 20 (Spl.).—Fredericksburg police said last night that Dan F. Henderson, 22, driver of the automobile which beheaded one man, crushed another to death and almost killed a third on Kings highway near here Saturday, had admitted in the presence of three police officers he was "crazy drunk" and does not remember having struck the men.

In the statement Henderson assumed all responsibility and exonerated his companions. William Fines, 18, of Sealston, also signed the statement. With them were Lee Howard, 18; John Howard, 19, and John De Shazo, 19, all of King George.

The statement, which outlines all movements of Henderson and Fines before the accident, including their picking up of the other three death-car occupants in Fredericksburg, alleges the driver was drunk from wine purchased from Lee J. Graves, of Plentiful Farm, King George County.

Sexton, Former Slave, Writes Memoirs of Life in Virginia

Fredericksburg, Va., June 20 (Spl.).—The memoirs of Joseph F. Walker, colored sexton of St. Georges Episcopal Church since 1878, and among the most respected members of the colored race in Fredericksburg, have been collected into a small cardboard-bound volume by the Rev. Dr. John J. Lanier, former rector of St. Georges and a writer since his retirement from the active ministry.

The autobiography, dedicated to Dr. Lanier, was dictated by Joseph to the minister, who wrote in a concluding comment, "It is a very moderate and modest statement of the bare facts of his useful life. It gives no idea of the estimation in which he is held by his many friends on account of his unfailing politeness and generosity. I am glad to call him my friend."

The review begins with Joseph's birth in 1854 as the slave of Col. William Goodwin, of Spotsylvania County, and recounts many experiences in the Civil War. For a number of years after the war he worked for board and room and small annual sums, eventually saving enough to build a cabin in Spotsylvania for his mother to live in for the rest of her life, which ended in 1914.

His contact with Judge Barton's home, where he went in 1873 to become a servant, resulted in his becoming a sexton that year through the urging of the grandfather of Edgar M. Young, a lumber merchant of present-day Fredericksburg.

As sexton, Joseph has served the Rev. Mr. Murdaugh, the Rev. John Mason, Dr. William Meade Clark, the Rev. Mr. McBride, Dr. Lanier and the Rev. Dudley Brogher, current rector.

Teachers' Pay Ready Shortly In Frederick

Was Due on June 10, But Tax Date Change Has Retarded Receipts.

Frederick, Md., June 20 (Spl.).—Delayed payment of salaries of school teachers in the city and Frederick County for May, due June 10, will be made in a few days it was disclosed at the office of the county commissioners today.

It is the first time the pay of teachers has ever gone beyond the time due in this county, not excepting the bank holiday. Such a situation is not likely to be repeated, as the last of the ten monthly payments of the school year, due in July, will be available from the State school fund, it was said.

May salaries were not paid at the usual time because money derived from tax accounts was not available. The school funds was about $7,000 short on April salaries, but this amount was made up from a balance in the hands of the school authorities. The main reason the county commissioners did not have the money to meet the salaries, they said, was because of the recent change of the fiscal year beginning July 1 to the calendar year beginning January 1. During the fiscal year taxes were due July 1, but interest was not charged on accounts until the following October 1, giving taxpayers three months in which to pay accounts without interest, instead of nine months under the January calendar year plan.

With about four months to go before interest is due this year, receipts at this time are not large. The commissioners have been using the funds in the administration of the county's business, until at this time a balance of not more than $3,600 is available from taxes. The monthly pay roll of the teachers is about $42,400.

The county commissioners have more than $200,000 in the closed Central Trust Co.

Gov. Kump Visits Girls' State Home

Salem, W. Va., June 20 (Spl.).—Headed by Gov. H. G. Kump, a large group of State and other officials celebrated West Virginia's seventy-first birthday here today by taking part in a public inspection of the Industrial Home for Girls.

Farm women's clubs of Harrison, Lewis and Doddridge Counties held a picnic in connection with the event, attended by many interested visitors. At noon a luncheon was held for the official party in the Jones cottage, girls of the home serving the meal.

Gov. Kump and Mrs. Ava Stanard, superintendent of the home, made brief talks at the official luncheon. Among the guests were two former superintendents of the home, Miss Elizabeth Erskine, of Wheeling, and Miss Jennie Sutton, of Moundsville.

On The President's Neck.

Postmaster General Farley has often demonstrated that he has no compunctions over the subordination of the Civil Service to party politics. But the cool effrontery of this two-job official in placing spoils above merit is fast reaching a point where the President must have difficulty in ignoring it.

The P. M. G. is pleased to joke at the "natural death" which overtook Mr. Roosevelt's instructions regarding a bill to bring postmasters under Civil Service rules. He insists upon retaining as patronage dispenser for Michigan a man who was forced to resign as collector of internal revenue because of charges of irregularities in office. He has refused to give up either his job as Democratic National chairman or as Postmaster General, thus casting ridicule on the President's half-hearted drive to oust party officials from high Federal offices. In Mr. Farley's own picturesque language "I'm right on his (the President's) lap." It would be more accurate to say that he is right on the President's neck.

In accepting his doctorate at Yale University yesterday, President Roosevelt said: "I can't tell today the party affiliations of most of the responsible people in government and it is a mighty good thing I can't." Mr. Farley's sardonic observations seem almost as though calculated to mock that statement. Sooner or later the President must face the problem arising out of nullification, by a member of his own Cabinet, of the principles he so ably supports in public.

Strange Gratitude From Cuba.

Over $60,000,000 of loans floated in the United States during the Machado regime have been recommended for repudiation by a Cuban commission appointed by the Havana government to investigate the issues.

Unless this action is reversed, its political stupidity will dishearten American friends of Cuba who sincerely wish for the success of that country's revolution. In repealing the Platt amendment, Congress not only removed fear of intervention from the minds of Cubans. It also expressed an implicit vote of confidence in the integrity and fair dealing of the new regime. A poor introduction to the new era of political emancipation would be provided if Cuba should proceed to denounce regularly assumed contractual obligations, incurred for nonpolitical purposes by a former government.

The present economic burden of these public works loans, and the probability that the proceeds were partly dissipated, may warrant readjustments of the debt burden by negotiation. But there is no excuse for any such high-handed, arbitrary action as that urged by the investigating commission. Numerous public improvements, financed with the aid of American loans, remain as a reminder of the benefits received. Even if the moral obligation to pay is not admitted, self-interest suggests that the present government can not afford to ignore the debts contracted by a predecessor.

Cuba will in the future need American capital to develop her industries and carry on her public improvements. Her chances of obtaining it will be seriously impaired if the confidence of American investors is destroyed by an act of bad faith defended on specious grounds.

"Sulphurous Fumes."

John Garner's emergence from the seclusion granted by the Vice Presidency is not without significance. Inasmuch as his statement was issued through the Democratic National Committee it was doubtless intended as an opening gun in the Congressional campaigns. But the interesting part of it was more in the nature of a confession than a political argument.

Mr. Garner frankly recognizes the domination of President Roosevelt over Congress—and approves it. He takes the view that "we have given the President a job to do; we have clothed him with authority, and it would be absurd to turn around and make it impossible for him to accomplish that which we asked him to accomplish." Having given the President such extensive power, members of the majority party in Congress, according to Mr. Garner, "had to accept his judgment and stand or fall with him." In that explanation the critical mind will detect a somewhat apologetic note, offset when the Vice President adds: "For myself, I say that if the President's course should take him to a political Hades, I will be at his elbow inhaling the sulphurous fumes with him and I will be proud to be there."

It should be flatly stated that this is an attitude which paves the way to dictatorships. Mr. Garner is probably right when he says that such danger in this country has been exaggerated. Yet the policy of blindly following the Executive, regardless of where he may lead, is far from traditional American doctrine. If it does not give rise to abuse of executive powers, the reason will be good judgment upon the part of Mr. Roosevelt rather than discretion on the part of Congress.

Mr. Garner's conclusion is out of harmony with our political philosophy in its initial premise. He seems to assume that the President has been given complete responsibility for shaping the policies of the Nation. That is not true. The legislative power still rests with Congress. The Presidency is primarily an administrative office. If Congress has surrendered its prerogatives, it is certainly not as a result of any mandate from the people. It is rather a manifestation of weakness on the part of Congressional leaders.

A Follow-Up On Montevideo.

An interesting development of statecraft during recent years has been increasing use of the multilateral treaty for promoting every-day international business relationships. In the commercial field the multilateral treaty simply seeks to make available to all signatories the trade advantages which reciprocal treaties tend to limit to two nations. It is inclusive rather than exclusive in its intent.

On the other hand, one of the most ancient and widely accepted principles of international commercial dealings is the most-favored-nation clause. To the particular nation to which it is extended, this assures that equality in respect of tariffs and other commercial barriers will be accorded.

Obviously, however, there may be a conflict in the operation of these two important methods for promoting order in international economic life. It is possible for the most-favored-nation clause to obstruct the development of multilateral treaties for economic and commercial liberalization.

This was demonstrated in connection with the Ouchy Convention, which Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands signed two years ago. By the terms of that treaty each country was to reduce its tariff rates 10 per cent per annum until a total reduction of 50 per cent had been achieved. All nations were invited to join the movement.

But it was pointed out that if one country reduced its tariffs under the Ouchy Convention, and another refused to adhere thereto, the latter might nevertheless get the benefit of the reductions under most-favored-nations treaties with parties to the Convention. No doubt the failure of the Convention to come into force has been due, in part, to this natural hesitation to extend automatic advantages to countries unwilling to assume treaty obligations in return.

The underlying difficulty is sometimes avoided by the conditional type of most-favored-nation clause, used by American countries in some of their treaties. Yet the conditional clause has its own shortcomings. It seeks to avoid the obligation to extend reductions of duties made in reciprocity treaties to countries unwilling to accord equivalent favors. But ordinary reciprocity treaties, unlike those of a multilateral character, are not open to adherence by the free act of a country not an original party.

The Conference of American States held at Montevideo last winter sought a solution to this knotty problem by drawing up a general agreement of far-reaching character. Under its terms the parties promise, as among themselves, not to invoke the most-favored-nation clause to obtain the advantages of multilateral trade conventions, when any country may take advantage of such conventions by merely ratifying or adhering to them.

This agreement is scheduled to be opened for signature by the Pan-American Union, if its governing board acts favorably at the meeting to be held next week. The agreement seeks fulfillment of a genuine need in the economic life of the world at the present time. There should be no delay in the preliminary moves to make it practicable.

The Pan-American Union is directed by the agreement to invite the participation of all the countries of the world. An important step toward the restoration of international trade may be taken if all important commercial countries promptly signify their intention to accept the invitation and sign the agreement, once it has been opened for signature by the Union.

Fair Play For The District.

In a conference with the District Commissioners, Secretary Ickes is reported to have agreed to advance PWA funds for construction of a sewage disposal plant for Washington. Other projects for which the District expects authorization to borrow from the PWA are said to be in a very doubtful status. This confirms a previous statement by a Public Works official to the effect that the District "will have to take its chances on even terms with other borrowers, thousands of whom are doomed to disappointment."

A year ago, when Secretary Ickes was requesting States and municipalities to take advantage of the $3,200,000,000 public works fund, the District Commissioners submitted several projects for consideration. It developed that the District could not borrow money without specific authorization from Congress. So Administrator Ickes made an outright grant of a small sum to investigate the necessity of a sewage disposal plant and to finance minor improvements in the sewage system. In drafting the District budget Congress deducted 70 per cent of that sum from the Federal contribution. The District now goes to the PWA with requests already delayed a year. Fairness demands that they be given a certain degree of precedence.

District projects should be subjected to the same scrutiny that has been applied to the proposals of any State or city. But it would be quite unreasonable to throw the delayed requests of Washington into the PWA hopper along with thousands of miscellaneous plans, many of them prepared much later. Approval of the sewage disposal project, which has been indorsed by a board of sanitary engineers whose investigation was financed by the PWA, is gratifying. But other projects for which funds are sought are no less desirable.

It is true that the PWA has spent a considerable sum on Federal projects in the District. But there is a wide gap between the type of benefits obtained from local and National undertakings. Cities borrowing money from the PWA are required to repay only 70 per cent of the amount spent for labor and materials. Since the Government has already manifested its generosity to other cities, Washington's delayed projects ought to have careful consideration before the limited sum available is allocated.

The Law And Public Opinion.

On the day that Joseph W. Harriman, former president of the Harriman National Bank of New York City, was convicted of falsifying bank entries the Legislature of that State by unanimous vote declared Warren T. Thayer, former chairman of its Senate Public Service Committee, guilty of official misconduct.

Mr. Harriman has been found guilty by a Federal jury of violations of the law which carry heavy penalties of fine and imprisonment. The presiding judge pointed out that it was for these illegal acts alone that the banker could be held responsible—not for mistakes of judgment that had brought even heavier losses to depositors. The decision in the Thayer case, on the other hand, strikes at a more subtle evil, often impossible to reach by relying upon the agencies of law enforcement.

Senator Thayer, who resigned in advance of the inquiry, was accused of official misconduct. He was on the pay roll of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. while engaged in "killing" legislation adverse to the public utility interests. His colleagues did not have to prove that he had taken bribes or otherwise broken the law in order to decide that he was unfit to be a legislator. He had obviously failed to measure up to the standards which can reasonably be required of those holding positions of public responsibility. Unfortunately, it is not always as easy as it was in these cases to remove from active life men who are unfaithful to the confidence reposed in them either as trustees of other people's money or as guardians of their political rights.

In periods of disillusionment, when many are embittered by their losses, the public is prone to forget that the chief purpose of punishment is to prevent a repetition of the punishable offenses. Certainly, it would be of no lasting benefit to impose sentences upon a host of Harrimans, or to expel from political life an army of Thayers, unless the public learns to detect and is ready to denounce the practices in which such men indulge.

The lowered moral tone and the deficient standards of fair dealing that prevailed during the years of speculative prosperity created conditions favorable to the safe commission of acts which our courts are now punishing and our legislators denouncing. Many of the unsavory revelations of today were known to the initiated long ago, and frequently they were condoned or at least regarded with easy tolerance or cynical indifference.

Some of the worst offenders against standards of decency in the conduct of business and finance have escaped and always will escape the clutches of the law. It is necessarily a rather clumsy device, which the more adroitly unscrupulous are often able to elude. Moreover no adequate legal defense can be set up against unwitting exploitation of a credulous public by men who may themselves be ignorant of the harm they are doing. Social losses due to mismanagement far outweigh those which are the result of outright fraud.

The law, in brief, can never offer society protection equal to that afforded by an enlightened public opinion prepared at all times to insist upon high standards of conduct in its business and political leaders.

"Wolf, Wolf!"

Blacklisting is an ancient sport, either despicable or ridiculous according to the degree of skill with which it is handled. Sociologically it seems to be an outgrowth of the medieval attitude toward witchcraft. When people with unconventional ideas could no longer be burned at the stake, fanatics substituted the blacklist as a means of character assassination.

But in our day of high-pressure publicity blacklists serve an additional purpose. At frequent intervals some ambitious soul who yearns for notoriety discovers that a "Red Network," including familiar names, is a first-class means of attracting public attention.

Here is revealed the same instinct which causes the rooster to crow on the highest perch. And it has a close kinship to the story of the boy who cried, "Wolf!" to get a little attention from his neighbors. The modern trick is to list a number of unstereotyped characters, with a few of the more solid citizenry thrown in to arouse controversy. If a police department, feeling the need of justifying its draft upon the pocketbook of the taxpayer, can be interested in the outcome the author's dividends (in publicity) are rich indeed.

Obviously it takes either an astute satirist or a complete nincompoop to proscribe Diego Rivera and Newton D. Baker in the same category, as was attempted in the list alleged to be used by the New York police to trail the "Red Menace."

Letters to the Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

"A Deserved Tribute."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Gov. Ritchie, of Maryland, in his notable letter of commendation in your anniversary edition, not only pays a deserved tribute to the public service being rendered by The Post, but a part of his message should be quoted and requoted in every part of the United States, namely, "Never before in the history of this country has a free, militant and intelligent press been so essential as it is today." The newspaper has a public duty, often lost sight of in the race for private profit or selfish interest or when swayed by political bias.

The Washington Post under its present ownership and its able editorial and news management is a distinct and in many ways original contribution to the newspapers of the country. Never before in the history of our country was the need and the value of such a paper so apparent as in the City of Washington at the present-day—when all the old landmarks seem for the hour to be swept away in the bewildering mess of fanciful political experiments—most of them contrary to all practical experience, all of them costly to the taxpayer, and not a few radical and even dangerous to right and liberty.

Charmed for the moment by the swift movement of novel events, deceived by the mirage of a promised hope from depression and disorganization, we seem to have lost all sense of our place, time and destiny and follow like blind sheep the beguiling of every false god. Calm and contemplating reason seem to be dethroned, constitutional restraint disregarded and full and free power given to Utopian expectation or rash chance.

Let us firmly resolve to pray for order out of confusion in legislation and in executive action—for courage and integrity of judicial opinion and decision, that the "government of the people, for the people and by the people shall not perish from the earth."

CHAS. B. CALVERT.

For Masses—Not Classes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me through your columns to express my hearty approval of the position assumed by one who signs himself as a "Fellow Worker," under date of June 3.

I think the practice of employment of husband and wife by the Government is unfair and unjust. Censure should be heaped upon those responsible for this practice, regardless of who they may be. If Congress, or the officials of the Government are to blame, or the resultant conditions are attributable to their neglect, mistakes or oversight, let the facts be made known and corrections be made with the least possible delay. The "Fellow Worker" explained only some of the unfair and unjust conditions in effect in a mild and tame way.

I can mention any number of cases, also names if requested, where husband and wife are so employed, the former drawing salaries of $4,000 to $4,500 per annum and the latter receiving salaries ranging from $2,000 to $3,000. These same people referred to, in some instances, own their homes and subrent a large portion of their property to others, thus adding more revenue to their incomes. This latter assertion applies to many renters of houses and apartments. It seems to be the desire and ambition of some people to grab and hog everything in sight, especially where money matters are concerned, with no thought for the many unfortunate men and women who are out of work and funds.

I believe in the NRA and all other A's 100 per cent if properly and prudently handled. My aims and desires are in favor of the masses instead of the classes—in other words, equal justice to all, special favors or privileges to none.

HENRY F. ASH.
Washington, June 9.

A Very Candid Opinion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was refreshing and encouraging to read your editorial in today's paper concerning the carpenters' strike. Such an attitude as you expressed meets with general public approval. Washington newspapers have been too inclined to comment on subjects of National significance, overlooking local affairs and practices deserving attention. Keep up the good work started. The public is sick and tired of the silly, foolish, unfair and destructive tactics of organized labor. You will make new friends and strengthen the confidence of the old ones by assuming a firm policy in discussing local affairs of vital concern to the public.

As a regular reader of The Post for many years, I want to congratulate you upon your progress under the new direction. From an editorial, news, feature and typographical standpoint, The Post has been greatly improved. There is a fertile field for a strong morning newspaper in Washington. It is yours almost exclusively; make the best of it for the public good.

One criticism I have to offer. The Post claims to be an independent publication. Yet you show in your treatment of news and headlines that you are hostile to Gen. Johnson for political reasons. Some of your best friends—business men—have detected this, plainly. The Post has nagged, misrepresented (indirectly), played up and in every conceivable manner endeavored to destroy him and make his work harder. This statement is based on a careful study of all of your stories since the NRA began to go in high. Your policy in relation to the NRA is unfair. The public is smart; keen brains analyze headlines and interpret the news. Your attempt to harrow Johnson is one of the ugly spots of the first year under the new ownership. It is all the more unworthy because you claim to be aboveboard.

Your woman's page is splendid. The men are reading the special articles. Whether women should work or "stay at home" is an intriguing subject.

In closing, put the spotlight on the evils, unfavorable things and bad conditions of every character in Washington. This is the Capital City and should be the model for the Nation. After all, the home people expect a newspaper to point out the bad things around its own feet—local conditions.

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER—AND NOT A NEW DEALER.
Washington, June 6.

As Others See It

The newspaper situation in Washington has a National interest. It is pleasant therefore to observe the immense progress made by The Washington Post, which now celebrates the ending of its first year under the ownership of Eugene Meyer, former governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. Meyer has transformed a moribund newspaper into a first-class reporter and interpreter of National news. He has sunk partisanship and made The Washington Post independent. It reports news of the Capital fully and intelligently and comments on it competently. In his direction of his newspaper Mr. Meyer is doing a National service.

Eagle and Oyster.

The eagle and the oyster are very unlike. Each is the product of his environment, just as each individual and each civilization are the products of their material, mental and moral environment. The life of the oyster is of very low quality. He has so little life that it is difficult to determine whether he is dead or alive. The eagle, on the other hand, impresses us with his strength, his stamina, his agility, his great abundance of life. Why is the eagle so different from the oyster?

When God made the eagle he pitched him out into the cold hazardous world under the command: "Take care of yourself, you are free, go where you please, but you must fight your own battles and look out for your own welfare." The eagle obeyed the command. He has never looked to society to protect him and has asked for no special privileges. This is the reason that he is an eagle. This is the reason that he was selected to sit above the Stars and Stripes as the true interpreter of Americanism.

But God takes care of the oyster. The oyster doesn't have to work or struggle. Society provides for all his wants. The oyster is provided with a strong, comfortable, luxurious home without any effort whatsoever on his part. He doesn't have to worry over unemployment, high prices, overproduction. Everything he needs is bountifully supplied. He doesn't have to do anything but eat and rest and sleep and improve his mind. This is the reason he hasn't any mind, this is the reason that he is more dead than alive. This is the reason he is an oyster. If a man would be an eagle he must pay the price. The man or woman who has the oyster ideal and lives the life of an oyster can never be anything but an oyster.

The philosophy of Americanism is based on the great biological law of science that struggle—hard struggle—is the law of life both for the individual and the Nation. This philosophy is never popular, but it is the only road to achievement and safety.

Awkward Introductions.

One of the easiest things to be awkward about is the matter of introductions. Not so long ago I sat at a luncheon in a public restaurant with a feminine companion. Our table was in a sort of booth, making it difficult to rise with any ease without pushing the table about and stepping into the aisle. It chanced that another young woman of my acquaintance passed up the aisle, greeted me, dropped a few casual sentences, and walked on.

Instead of scrambling from my bench, I remained seated and replied pleasantly, only to be rebuked later by my companion for not having performed an introduction. Now this, manifestly, was absurd. It is seldom necessary or even desirable to introduce people casually encountered in public places, and under no circumstances is it advisable if the introduction involves scrambling about.

In most Eastern cities the business of introducing people has been treated with refreshing common sense. Only at house parties, at small dinner parties and similar functions is it considered essential, and then the introduction is made in the simplest possible form.

The matter of issuing formal invitations is another bugbear. Purveyors of engraving have fostered the idea that we should announce, in courtly language and suitable hand-cut typography, the most casual of celebrations, the most ordinary of comings or goings. As a matter of fact, the engraved invitation is nothing but a nuisance and may be dispensed with for anything short of weddings, large dances or gargantuan dinner parties.

Jab-Off Gow-Talk.

Postoffice, Thursday.

"TRIED t' kick the mud, gotta gun an's on the dust, he's. H next f'r'im."

No, Kind Reader, the weather has not been too much for us. Nor is the type pied. The gentleman above quoted is speaking in terms entirely intelligible to many thousands of Americans.

He is speaking of a fallen friend. And here's what is meant:

"He tried to break himself of the opium-smoking habit, contracted the habit of taking morphine by hypodermic injections, and is now a victim of the cocaine habit, he is. The heroin habit will be the next thing for him."

That word-clipping is due merely to the nervous tension of the drug-taker. Those terms so cryptic to you are established in his vocabulary. After long and first-hand study, David W. Maurer, of Ohio State University, has compiled what almost amounts to a dictionary of the narcotic habitue's language.

The Maurer investigations were conducted in a scientific spirit, and by practical methods. Their conductor is a thoroughgoing sociological worker. He was interested in discovering the social effects of the drug habit. So he went about among the addicts, especially among their most numerous divisions: the slaves of cocaine and of opium and its derivatives.

But he found, first of all, that when any of this army of unfortunates talked of the topic in which he was interested he couldn't understand them. They have an argot reaching the proportions of a dialect.

With the law against it, the drug traffic is necessarily a clandestine trade. Its patrons, also, practice a vice that must be, as far as possible, hidden. Composing a secret group in the total of society, they require means of communication secret from unfriendly outsiders.

Moreover, the drug-taker's world is severely limited. It is not only because of fear that the non-addict is disliked by the addict. This dislike is symptomatic of drug addiction. So the addicts are clannish, and as an habitue's habit grows stronger he lives more and more among his pathological kin. The lingual result has been here what it is wherever a human group is in any way isolated from the rest of humankind: there has been a highly specialized evolution of dialect.

This dialect David Maurer carefully studied and eventually mastered. Now he makes it public.

There appears to be no single generic term for "dope"—and that slang word "dope" seems to be studiously avoided by its thralls. Drugs are "gow," "junk" or "peter." Their retail sellers are "ice-tong doctors" who "peddle rations" in lots variously described as "bindles," "checks" or "S. O. S's." Customers of such liberal tastes as not to prefer one sort of drug above another are "junkers" or, on the Pacific Coast, "guys from Mount Shasta." Anybody under the influence of a drug is "on the gow."

* * *

The tragic extent of the cocaine habit has liberated some of its argot into the free field of normal slang—but only some. Most of us understand that "snow" and "coke" mean cocaine; some of us are aware what "happy dust" does; but few of us have heard it called "burney." We may be aware of a "snifter" and a "snow-bird," but would we readily guess that a "sleigh-ride" indicated a cocaine debauch? However, the initial "C" is the commonest designation of cocaine among addicts, just as "M" stands with them for morphia and nothing else, while "O" is opium-gum ready to be smoked.

The Maurer glossary grows grimmer as it grows longer and produces new terms whereby these diggers of their own graves call a spade anything except a spade. An opium-smoker is a "gonger" or a "stem." Heroin—which owes its fatal name to the false sense of courage that this drug's earlier doses produce in its almost immediate victims—is generally taken in tablet form, and those tablets are "coverage pills." A morphine drunk is a "slumber party;" its hypodermic needles are "guns" or "artillery;" the act of injection is "a bang in the air" or "a jab-off," and the vein that has to be punctured is "the main line."

Has your family doctor ever told you of some stranger reporting at his office and there being overcome by a nerve crisis requiring immediate administration of some narcotic? The patient is probably a drug addict who finds himself at the hour when his habit demands its poison, yet who is for some reason unable to procure the drug through the usual illegitimate channels. So he runs to the nearest physician and simulates or increases the symptoms; he is "throwing a wing-ding." His natural enemies are the agents of the Federal Narcotics Bureau, with its headquarters here in Washington, and them he derides—and dreads—as "gazers," "uncles" and "whiskers."

But to anyone even slightly acquainted with the horrors of drug addiction there is not much humor in its dialect nor does its lexicographer observe any. The smiling addict has death-dread in his heart. He knows that even an attempt at hospital cure will be an agony; he calls it "going through the torture chamber." He does possess a phrase for self-cure; it is "kicking off." Yet he is keenly conscious that in not more than one case in a thousand does the phrase become a reality.

Along the Potomac

Carlisle Bargeron

They're Feeling Their Oats.

APPARENTLY the adjournment of Congress has brought a belated spring to the Democrats, causing at least three of the leaders to burst into poetry. Vice President Garner in a lyrical piece written by Charlie Michelson reveals that even the Republicans have told him privately they were sunk. He undertakes also to apologize for the rubber-stamp nature of the Congress, saying that after all Mr. Roosevelt has been given a job to do and he should not be hamstrung. Nobody ever asked the Congress to hamstring the President, of course, but what Mr. Garner overlooks is that he and the Congress were elected along with Mr. Roosevelt. A job was given to them to cooperate and by that it was assumed they would advise and counsel with the leader, and certainly to advise him against measures which in their heart they knew were wrong.

BARGERON.

It was hardly expected that the Democrats would defy him on the floor of the House or Senate as the Progressives have done the last two Republican Presidents. To have done this would not have shown party discipline. They could have at least counseled with the President in the privacy of the White House.

The plain truth is that they consider they have the cleverest politician who has ever been in the White House, one who will win elections for them, and as long as they get their patronage they will go along. As to the effect of the legislation they pass, they have little concern. It is a pretty harsh indictment, but it is true.

• • • •

Over at the Postoffice Department, Jim Farley was in an even gayer mood than Garner. In a press conference he apparently threw discretion to the winds with Congress now adjourned and the Administration's pockets bulging with authority and money to do just about anything it wants. He thought it was a big joke when he was asked what had become of the legislation, advertised earlier, to put postmasters under Civil Service. And notwithstanding that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has just fired Horatio J. Abbott as collector of internal revenue at Detroit, Jim will continue to recognize him as the Michigan patronage boss. This despite the fact that two of Abbott's appointees to the revenue office are now under investigation by the Treasury. As fast as Abbott sends in the names he will appoint them, said Jim gayly; it is up to the departments to check them.

• • • •

It seems to me, though, that Mr. Roosevelt himself was just about as light-hearted as either Garner or Jim, up at Yale to receive a degree. Said he:

"While there has been a certain amount of laughter about the use of brains in Government, it seems to me a good practice. It will be continued."

It is such as this that the Democrats have in mind when they express privately their admiration for him as a politician. It is undobtedly one of the most effective defenses the Administration has hit upon. But I don't think it is original with Mr. Roosevelt. For sometime the so-called brain trust has been going around saying they can't understand why there is opposition to "brains" in Government. The fact they say this, that they think they really are brainy sharply questions their qualifications, in my opinion.

Of course, no one has objected to "brains" in Government. It is a crackerjack political stunt for Mr. Roosevelt to say what he did, but it tends to weaken his reputation for frankness. He doesn't want to lose that.

There have been all sorts of complaint against some of the mental processes of the Administration and of the brain trust underlings, but never against the use of brains, ability, experience or competence in Government. The demand has, instead, been for these qualities, not against them.

EWING YOUNG MITCHELL, Assistant Secretary of Commerce. An original New Dealer and before-Chicago Democrat, he wanted the ambassadorship of Denmark, but got plunked down among lighthouses, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, steamboats and the aeronautics branch of Commerce instead. A shrewd, capable lawyer by trade, he is also a wily politician. Tussled with the Democratic machine in Kansas City, but got the little end of the horn. Sincere, forthright, he is chiefly interested in seeing that things are done right. When droves of Federal employes have fled the long halls of Commerce, he sticks to his desk, hammering problems far into the night. Brisk, full of business, he greets all comers affably. Looks at them over the top of his glasses.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

It Isn't Wealth That Counts But Certainty of a Little

By Robert Quillen

The tourist in Denmark is surprised and puzzled by the number of old people who seem content in poverty.

They are happy because they feel secure. They do not depend on the reluctant generosity of dutiful sons and daughters. They are not segregated like social outcasts in dreary homes for aged paupers. They do not live in dread of the day when their meager savings will be exhausted.

They are pensioned by the state. They did their share of the world's work and now they have their reward. They live long and happily because they are free of all care and anxiety. They know beyond all doubt that no misfortune can deprive them of their living.

That knowledge of security is the one thing needed above all others to make workers content and cleanse their hearts of bitterness.

What will become of us when I can no longer find work? What will happen to my family if I get hurt or fall sick? How can we live when we are too old to work?

These are the questions that give the working man no peace?

The workers of America are striking for shorter hours or more pay or recognition of the union, but these are not the things they most desire. These are but means to an end.

The thing that lies at the root of all "unrest" is the feeling of insecurity.

All men know that industrial workers are today less secure than any other class in America.

Give them assurance of a living, in good times and bad, in sickness and in health, in vigorous youth and worn-out old age, and few industrial problems will remain.

It will cost money, but it will cost less than turmoil and uncertainty and strife. Contented workers are the one sure foundation of America's economic system.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

With Bated Breath.

I HOPE I do not draw down the wrath of the psychologists when I class suspense as an emotion, and call it one of the last primary feelings left in a generally abstracted world. To be sure, even suspense no longer holds its awe and personal edge. "Jeepers!" grunted Neanderthal man, or words to that effect, as he ran. "This saber-tooth tiger is going to get me yet!"

THEO. HALL

But we, in our mousselines de soie, or collars and cufflinks, tend to lose that exquisite essence. The wildest of our mundane worries is seldom quite so sharp and stimulating. In preference, we want someone else to face the saber-tooth and, better yet, to write about it. Little is so true as the old dictum of the short story schools—put your hero in a hole and then get him out of it.

And if that is the case with a short story, carefully typed out in a quiet corner over innumerable cigarettes, we find suspense considerably more titillating when it occurs in a personal narrative, when the author himself has actually been in the hole. Did Walter Baron get out of the Amazonian jungle alive? Did Sven Hedin preserve the skin of his teeth from Himalayan glaciers and Tibetan nomads? Did Tatiana Tchernavin escape the murderous Ogpu and reach Finland in safety? It takes no great wisdom to guess the answers—else why the books? But these three narratives are calculated to keep your breath bated for a week.

• • • •

Tallest of these tales is that of Walter Baron, entitled "Devil-Brother" (Minton Balch, $2.75). Indeed, a good deal of it is pretty hard to swallow.

But I liked it none the less, this diary of a 17-year-old German boy, who accompanied an expedition into the jungles of Northern Brazil in 1927-28. Not so much for the stories of jungle cities and pyramids filled with gold (he was captured once by Indians and bound by gold chains), nor for the cannibal rites (captured again, he watched a companion fricasseed), but for the way that boy could make the redskins bite the dust. With revolver and Springfield, with dagger and dynamite bomb, he laid them low all over the jungle. If you have a repressed desire for the old-time dime-novel, try "Devil-Brother." That, by the way, is what the Indian tribes soon called him—with adequate justice.

Of the 18 members of the expedition, Baron alone is now living. Despite the easy comment upon that, there seems to be a fair amount of collateral evidence to the factuality of this yarn. But I never look a gift-book in the mouth when it offers so much exciting entertainment.

In "A Conquest of Tibet" (Dutton, $5), Sven Hedin, the noted Swedish explorer, narrates a number of his trips into that strange country from 1900 on. Mountains and soldiers, monasteries and dancing lamas, yaks and pilgrims, throng his pages and appear in 250 pen and ink sketches by the author. Though he can't draw animals, the rest are very charming and completely authentic. The publishers have made a handsome job of the book.

First he tried to get to Lhasa, disguised as a Buriat pilgrim, at a time when no foreigner had entered there since 1846. That failed. Then he tried from another angle, and failed again. Years later, he pushed through several of the great unexplored areas and discoverd the source of the Indus. On another expedition he reached Shigatse and met the Tashi Lama, highest in Tibet while the Dalai Lama was in China.

Suspense, in this book, must be sought between the lines. Hedin disdains to color it. Yet blizzards in passes 17,000 feet high, raging rivers to cross, wild yaks charging, and all the hazard of exploration in bleak and forbidding country give the book its due share of vicarious heart-in-throat.

But not the danger of the hostile Tibetans, I'm sorry to say. By and large their resistance was passive, and when the governor of a province with his menacing troops came up to oust Hedin, it was with politeness and an air of "Really, you know, old chap, I'll get in a deuce of a lot of trouble with the Lama if you don't move out of the country!"

The oddity of that is very engaging. So is the whole tone of this fine and most readable travel book.

But it's Tatiana Tchernavin's "Escape from the Soviets" (Dutton, $2.50) which will give you the compound creeps. A liberal and educated woman, she by no means expected that Bolshevik rule would endanger her. But with her husband and young son she was hounded from Russia after the revolution.

The story of their flight to Finland, harassed by cold and hunger and the Ogpu, is one to chill the blood. Told simply and with absolute credibility, this escape lifts the pages to a height where they are almost as unbearable to read as they are impossible to lay down. I wouldn't care to go through it again, but I wouldn't have missed it for worlds.

The Once Over

DR. ROOSEVELT MAKES ANOTHER EXAMINATION.

Dr. Roosevelt—Well, Sam, you've been under intensive treatment for more than a year now. How do you feel?

Uncle Sam—I think I'm better, but if I'm as well as you say, why do I have to keep on taking all these medicines?

Dr. Roosevelt—You're not taking all the medicines. Some of those bottles, like that Silver Elixir, I haven't even opened yet. A lot of these tablets and capsules are here just in case.

Uncle Sam—Good heavens, doc! You don't mean to say there's even some more stuff you may try on me?

Dr. Roosevelt—Oh, come, Sam, old boy; you've got so used to taking whatever the doctor ordered for the last year that you just shut your eyes and swallow anything.

Dr. Roosevelt—The mere fact that you are getting harder to handle is a good sign, Sam.

• • • •

Uncle Sam—One thing I'm mighty glad of is that you're easing up on those code capsules. Taking those things every 15 minutes in hot water was pretty tough.

Dr. Roosevelt—You had plenty of hot water, didn't you?

Uncle Sam—I'll say. And it was getting hotter all the time. Say, doc, what was in those code capsules, anyhow?

Dr. Roosevelt—To be frank with you, I don't know. My original prescription got mixed up with a lot of miscellaneous papers and in the confusion some of the chemists were making up pills from crossword puzzles and telephone numbers.

• • • •

Uncle Sam—How much dope is there in that NRA sirup, doc?

Dr. Roosevelt—Why worry? It makes you feel better, doesn't it?

Uncle Sam—Yes, but I lie awake nights with the dread fear that I may become a dope addict.

Dr. Roosevelt—You were a dope addict under the Republicans, but you didn't knew it.

Uncle Sam—I guess maybe I was, but the dreams seemed more tangible.

• • • •

Dr. Roosevelt—Well, I think you've come along splendidly. You're now doing so well I won't have to operate.

Uncle Sam—You won't have to operate! For the luvvamike, what have I been undergoing all this time?

Dr. Roosevelt—I assure you I haven't operated.

Dr. Roosevelt—They just represent authority. I don't intend to use them unless I have to.

Uncle Sam—That's putting it up to me pretty plain; I guess it's up to me to get better quick.

Dr. Roosevelt—It's swell the way you grasp things. How soon may I expect to see you up?

Uncle Sam—I dunno, but I know I'll get up sooner if you'll do two things.

Dr. Roosevelt—What are they?

Uncle Sam—First, keep that Darrow boy from playing that drum just outside the sick room.

Dr. Roosevelt—I'm doing my best; I invited him over thinking he'd be good company for you. What's the other thing you want done?

Uncle Sam—Lay off those section 7-A pills until there's some agreement as to what's in 'em. And, say, doctor, what's all that noise just above my window?

Dr. Roosevelt—Oh, that's the labor unions dancing on the tin roof.

Uncle Sam—And you say everybody wants me to recover!

State of West Virginia Borrowing $2,000,000

Charleston, W. Va., June 20 (Spl.), Two million dollars is being borrowed by the West Virginia State government to tide the treasury over the end of the fiscal year, which closes June 30. State banks are supplying the cash.

Subscriptions have come in promptly, despite the 2½ per cent discount rate, the lowest on record in the State, according to R. E. Talbott, State treasurer. The loan is for 60 days. The money, Talbott says, is to be used to pay school teachers' salaries and to make up an overdraft in the State school fund.

Mount Airy Canning Is Near Completion

Mount Airy, Md., June 20 (Spl.). Retarded early this week by heavy rains, which prevented growers from harvesting and mowing, canning of the local pea crop, described by factory officials here as considerably above normal, is expected to be completed within the next few days.

Local growers will receive $52.50 per ton for peas, an increase of $5 over last season's price.

Eastern High Awards Given At Exercises

253 Graduates Receive Diplomas; Whitwell Is Speaker.

The "hail and farewell" motif was the order in the auditorium of Eastern High School last night as 253 seniors were graduated from the three-year course.

Principal speaker was George M. Whitwell, a member of the Board of Education, who discussed opportunities for service available to the graduates, and urged as many of them as possible to continue their educations.

Invocation was pronounced by the Rev. Clarence H. Corkran, pastor of Douglas Memorial M. E. Church. Awards were presented by Charles Hart, principal, and diplomas were awarded by Allan Davis, principal of Roosevelt High School.

The Gorgas Memorial award was won by Harriett Elizabeth Taylor for the best essay written by a student in the District schools. The Chamber of Commerce award was given Fred M. Bishoff, and Thomas Nolan won the Athletic award. The Theta Pi alumae award went to Miles Libbey.

The Phi Pi Epsilon trophy went to Fremont Davis. Bernice Shuey won the orchestra award. Lillian Friedman gave the valedictorian address.

Rivanna Bridge Contract Is Given

Charlottesville Firm to Construct New Span.

Charlottesville, Va., June 20 (Spl.).—The State Highway Commission has awarded the contract for the new free bridge over the Rivanna River, at the eastern end of town, to the contracting firm of Haley, Chisholm & Morris, of this city.

The contract price was not immediately announced, but the local contractors were low bidders for the span in March with a figure of $62,373. It was estimated today that the total cost would amount to about $75,000. John Morris, member of the firm, said work would begin within a week.

The bridge will be located about 50 feet downstream from the present structure, which carries traffic from the direction of Washington and Richmond. The western approach, on the side of the river nearest the city, probably will be built to care for roads from three directions. On the eastern end the curve on the highway coming down from Pantops will be reduced.

Teachers' College Gets Campus Fund

Mrs. A. B. Chandler Makes Gift at Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 20 (Spl.).—With the stipulation that it must be used to beautify the campus in any manner the present college administration may find desirable, Mrs. A. B. Chandler, jr., has made a monetary gift, amount not revealed at the request of donor, to the Fredericksburg State Teachers College.

Accompanying the gift was a statement that it is offered as a memorial to Mrs. Chandler's husband, the late President A. B. Chandler, jr., of the State Teachers College, and also as a "gesture of appreciation for the college as it is today and of confidence in what it is yet to be."

The late President Chandler's will had set aside a large sum of money to be used in aiding needy students who otherwise would be denied a college education.

Prohibition Party Names Candidate

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 20 (Spl.). The Rev. John Wesley McDonald, Methodist Episcopal minister of Fairmont, was nominated for United States Senator at a State convention of the Prohibition party here today.

A platform was adopted favoring retention of the State prohibition amendment, protection of the small business man against the "crushing codes of big business," return of schools of the State to the counties, establishment of a National currency "both sufficient and sound," and a self-sustaining Postoffice Department.

It was announced that William D. Upshaw, of Atlanta, Ga., Presidential candidate of the party in the last election, would lead the party campaign in West Virginia during September.

Robins Seeks Bench Place

Somerset County State's Attorney Asks G. O. P. Nomination.

Crisfield, Md., June 20 (Spl.).—With the announcement of his candidacy, John B. Robins, of Crisfield, Somerset County State's attorney, is the first Republican to enter the field and the eighth candidate for the three vacancies soon to occur on the circuit court bench of the first judicial district, which comprises Dorchester, Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset Counties.

Mr. Robins graduated from New York University of Law in 1898 and has practiced here continuously since then. In 1920 and 1922 he served as State Senator from Somerset County and was instrumental in the enactment of laws on behalf of the seafood industry. He was first elected State's attorney for Somerset County in 1926, and is now completing the second four-year term.

In the coming fall election the office of chief judge and two associates in the first judicial district are to be filled. The present chief judge is John R. Pattison, of Cambridge. The associate judges are Robert F. Duer, of Princess Anne, and Joseph I. Bailey, of Salisbury. They complete their terms as jurists this year.

Seeking their party's nomination for chief judge are three Democrats, George Meyers and Gordon Tull, of Princess Anne, and Benjamin F. Johnson, of Salisbury. Democratic candidates for the associate judgeships are James M. Crockett, of Pocomoke City; Franklin Upshur, of Berlin; T. Sangston Insley and Emerson C. Harrington, jr., both of Cambridge.

It is understood that Judge Duer may seek the Republican nomination for continuance on the bench. It is also reported that James A. McAllister, State's attorney of Dorchester County, may become an aspirant to judgeship.

Junior Highs Graduate 879 In Washington

Exercises of Five Schools Held Yesterday Afternoon.

Meeting in solemn and colorful settings, five District junior high schools graduated 879 pupils yesterday afternoon.

The door of opportunity and the chance for service in the world beyond the walls of classrooms are in evidence even in these troubled times, Robert S. Anderson, of the Board of Education, told 131 members of the graduating class at Powell Junior High School.

Roosevelt High School Auditorium was the scene of the Powell commencement, which was held at 2 p. m.

Pathways of education should be pursued as far and as long as it is possible, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, of the Board of Education, told the 153 graduates of Alice Deal Junior High School.

"Enviable" Record Cited.

Mrs. Doyle pointed to the "enviable" record made by Alice Deal students in the senior high schools.

"Deal students have distngushed themselves by their success in the senior classes of the District," Mrs. Doyle said.

Two hundred youngsters got their "sheepskins" at Paul Junior High. Dorothy Schearrer, a graduating student, was the principal speaker, and W. B. Nairn presented the diplomas.

Miss Jessie LaSalle, assistant superintendent of schools, was the presiding officer and impromptu speaker as 190 pupils were graduated from Stuart Junior High School.

Tell of Development.

Taking as their topic "The Gift We Bring," a group of students told of the development they had received at the junior high schools when commencement exercises were held at Gordon Junior High.

H. O. Hine, secretary of the Board of Education, presided at the exercises in the school auditorium. Invocation was delivered by the Rev. J. W. Ketchum, of the Peck Memorial Chapel. Diplomas were given 205 graduating pupils.

All names of junior high school graduates were published Sunday in The Post.

Wheat Inspected In Carroll County

Most Curtailment Pacts Found Observed.

Westminster, Md., June 20 (Spl.). Started several weeks ago under the direction of 12 inspectors and two county engineers, Government wheat contract acreage inspection in Carroll County will be completed this week, according to L. C. Burns, county agricultural agent.

The inspection covered 3,452 contract acres, owned by 800 wheat growers. Only a few cases were reported where farmers failed to comply strictly with their agreements.

With the best wheat crop in years reported, a yield of 900,000 bushels is predicted here. That the curtailment plan will not affect the average production in Carroll County was held due to the fact that under the contract a 15 per cent reduction was made on an average yield estimated over a period of three years starting in 1930, and that a drastic reduction in acreage was made by wheat growers in 1931 and 1932 due to low prices. The first benefit payment, amounting to $68,000, was made to Carroll County growers last December. The second payment, totaling about $23,000, will be made soon.

Waynesboro, Va., June 20 (Spl.). Fire of undetermined origin destroyed a large barn and four adjacent buildings on the A. E. Houff farm near here today.

Thirty tons of hay and straw were burned, but most of the machinery and live stock were saved. Loss was estimated at $7,000.

The blaze was discovered by Gordon Houff, 7, and Billy Spilman, 7, playing nearby.

The Beginning of Summer.

The summer solstice (solstice comes from two Latin words: sol, meaning sun, and the verb sistere, meaning to stand still) marks the astronomical beginning of summer, June 21.

But when I was a small boy at the Grammar School in New Haven we were always taught that in ordinary language, whether spoken or written, summer began with the first day of June, autumn with the first day of September, winter with the first day of December, and spring with the first day in March.

In foreign countries that was not so, but I never heard any American say that the seasons began on the 21st day of those respective months until I was 38 years old.

Many authors—the precise Henry James, for example—speak of the first day of June as the beginning of summer, &c. This certainly seems to me more natural. The 21st day of June is the longest day of the year; it is ridiculous that with the beginning of summer the days should grow shorter. And Midsummer Day in England is always June 24, and has been so for many centuries. Even before the Norman conquest, in the middle of the tenth century, Midsummer Day came about that time.

The expression "midsummer madness" means the height of madness. The very word lunacy is derived from the Latin Luna, the moon. And the lunar month in which Midsummer Day comes was always supposed to breed madness—we still use the expression moonstruck.

I have never been in the tropical zone except once. That was when we made a glorious journey to Honolulu in 1916. And we entered that zone at sea on the summer solstice, June 21. For the first time in my life I saw the ship's captain, when he took the sun at noon, look north rather than south. It was quite exciting.

I insist that summer begins (for all practical purposes) on June 1, but it is now summertime, whether you agree with me or not. So let us all unite in singing heartily the song, "Sumer is Y Cumen In."

This famous round has the oldest piece of polyphonic and canonical music of which we have any record. This part was written almost exactly 700 years ago by a monk, John of Fornsete, at the Abbey of Reading, England.

Mrs. Susan R. Bohn, 65, Is Buried in Maryland

Mount Airy, Md., June 20 (Spl.). Funeral services for Mrs. Susan Ruth Bohn, 65, of Mount Airy, who died Monday at the home of her niece, Mrs. Clark Gabler, Waynesboro, Pa., were held today at the home of her son, Shirley W. The Tarim River is the chief water course of Chinese Turkestan, in Central Asia. It rises in the extreme northern part of Kashmir, flowing first north, then east and southeast through Tukestan's great desert basin, where it eventually loses itself in the marshlands, irrigation ditches and in the hot dry sands of the desert.

The river is 1,000 miles long, including its upper length, which is sometimes known as the Yarkand-Darya. The river proper is formed by the confluence of the Aksu, Yarkand and Kholan-Darya at the southern base of the western Tyan-Shan ranges, about 60 miles southeast of Aksu.

It flows out of the glacier country of the Karakorum, and through the Kuen-lun Mountains, past the City of Yarkand before it reaches the point of confluence. After this point it divides into two parallel arms, which flow across the basin. Here evaporation, seepage and irrigation reduce the mighty river into streamlets and marshes called Lob-Nor.

Bendigo (William Thompson), well-known gypsy fighter of a century ago, and English champion, was a criminal in the eyes of the law—as were all other fighters who broke the then stringent laws against boxing. Bendigo, however, was more unlucky or less cautious than most boxers, for he was thrown in jail at least 28 times for fighting. On his last trip to jail he was converted by a preacher, and upon being released became a preacher himself.

Housing Setup Will Not Wait On Bill Signing

Hopkins Expected to Push Program to Revive Building Trade.

Without waiting for President Roosevelt to sign the $1,000,000,000 housing bill, passed in the closing minutes of Congress, the Administration was yesterday quickly formulating an organization and plans for administration of the measure as soon as it becomes law.

Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Emergency Relief Administrator, was picked to be the administrator of the housing program, but he is expected to delegate the actual execution of the job to Corrington Gill, director of statistics and research in the relief administration.

Much in the manner that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of NRA, organized that agency weeks in advance of the signing of the NRA act, Administration officials have tentatively selected executives for the various divisions of the Housing Administration, engaged architects to pass on plans and publicity men to stimulate the country to a new consciousness of homes—their purchase, modernization and repair. These steps are designed to rehabilitate the construction industry.

The publicity campaign will be under the direction of Ward Canady, president of the United States Advertising Corporation. Apparently the country will be exhorted this summer to "buy homes," "repair homes," "paint up" and "clean up," just as last summer it was urged by NRA to "Do Your Par."

According to the Associated Press, Hopkins may make a quick trip to Europe, to study British housing operations, regarded as a material factor in economic recovery achieved by that country, but this could not be confirmed at Hopkin's office.

It is expected that the entire housing program, including the insurance of mortgage loans, repair loans and the establishment of Federal mortgage corporations, will be in operation within 30 days after President Roosevelt signs the bill, which he is expected to do next week.

Marking further progress in the country's drive to put men to work, the Agricultural Department yesterday allocated another $200,000,000 among the States for highway construction out of funds authorized by Congress. It will be many weeks, however, before any of this money is spent. PWA also started to examine applications, in order to allocate the additional $500,000,000 made available by Congress.

Aid for Needy Sick Planned

Rehabilitation Seen as Likely to Reduce Relief Lists.

A survey to devise means of rehabilitating ill persons on relief rolls, to make them self-supporting, will be undertaken by the health committee of the Council of Social Agencies at the request of Elwood Street, director of the Board of Public Welfare.

The study, first suggested by Commissioner Allen, will involve the mobilization of the health resources of the community to meet the health needs. Analyses of what is being done to provide medical service to unemployed families will be made by the council, and recommendations for improvements will be made to Street.

Commissioner Allen believes that many persons are now on relief rolls who otherwise might be gainfully employed if physically able to work. It is possible, Commissioner Allen said, that the welfare board may engage physicians and dentists to assist in restoring health to relief clients.

Overtime Pay Asked for EWA

Protest Made to Clark by Delegation of 25 Workers.

Protests against being worked overtime without additional compensation were made yesterday to Capt. Howard F. Clark, executive officer of the District EWA, by a delegation of 25 workers.

The men claim they had been employed on projects for which they received 60 cents an hour. Last week, they said, they were taken from their jobs and assigned to distributing work authorization cards.

On their first jobs they had been working six hours a day, while they spent seven hours overtime in distributing the cards, for which they received only 40 cents an hour.

Capt. Clark did not give any decision on the complaint. All the men are on monthly work budgets and are entitled to earn stipulated amounts, depending upon their relief needs. It is expected that the overtime work will be credited to the men on their monthly budgets.

Bridal Held For Daughter Of Senator

Miss Susan Sheppard Wed to Mr. McGillicuddy at Residence.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

For the second time in two weeks the home of Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard on Nineteenth street was the scene of a charming wedding yesterday afternoon when their daughter, Miss Susan Sheppard, became the bride of Mr. Cornelius McGillicudy, jr., son of Mr. Cornelius McGillicudy, famous in the world of baseball, as Connie Mack, and Mrs. McGillicudy, of Philadelphia.

The ceremony yesterday was performed at 11 o'clock by the Rev. Dr. Rufus Weaver in the presence of members of the immediate families and a few close friends. The dining room and the drawing room, where the ceremony took place, were decorated with white roses, lilies of the valley and baby's breath against a background of palms and ferns.

Duke's Beauty Queen.

The bride, who was selected as the Queen of Beauty during her junior year at Duke University in Durham, N. C., from which she was graduated earlier this month, was married in the gown she wore in the spring when she was crowned Queen of the May, at the annual festival at the university. It was of white satin and lace, with a high de Medici collar, and sleeves puffed above the elbows and terminating in points over the hands. The voluminous tulle veil fell over a long train of the satin and she carried a bouquet of Madonna lilies and lilies of the valley.

Miss Lucille Sheppard, who was maid of honor for her sister, wore a gown of white mousseline de soie made on long lines and trimmed with narrow pleated ruchings. Her wide-brimmed hat was of white straw and she carried a bouquet of summer flowers.

Mr. McGillicuddy was best man for his son, and there were no ushers.

The bride attended Gunston Hall School in Washington, and also spent a year at school in Texas before going to Duke University. Mr. McGillicuddy attended a preparatory school in Philadelphia before entering Duke University, where the young couple first met. The bridegroom will forego graduation from the university to enter business in the Quaker City in the autumn.

ATTENTION!

A prominent editor, author and explorer, of Washington, after many years of delving into ancient ruins and histories, believes he has found the lead to the key to the Mayan hieroglyphic writings that will unfold the history of that lost civilization, and thus give the Americas their real records prior to the coming of Columbus.

To accomplish this unlocking of the sealed past a local group is forming a syndicate for the specific purpose of establishing in Washington a high-grade publishing house. As a basis for this business the syndicate has acquired an unusually attractive book on the Mayas, embodying the known history of that wonderful race to date in a striking story of wide appeal, written by the above editor and author. The syndicate has created a very unique sales plan for the book, devised to drive distribution above the normal best-seller mark, which should assure members of the group a quick repayment of their investments, leaving their interest in the organization clear for future profits. In addition, the returns should supply sufficient capital to the treasury to conduct a well-considered expedition into Mexico, Yucatan, Central America, Java and India, for the purpose of solving the lost Mayan history.

This expedition will provide the publishing house with other books to follow the present one, ready now for publication. It is expected that the full translations of the three ancient Mayan books, held in Dresden, Paris and Madrid museums, unread up to this time, will be among the subsequent issues of the Washington Publishing House. It would be difficult now to estimate their almost fabulous value.

The syndicate group is limited. Its management invites a few enterprising persons, who would like to share the fame and profits of this sound, meritorious undertaking, to investigate carefully with a view to taking a financial interest in the project and becoming active in its management. For full particulars, apply to THE CAPITAL PUBLISHING SYNDICATE, 948 Shoreham Building, Washington, D. C.

Northa Porter Becomes Wife Of Lieut. Mayo

Daughter of I. C. C. Chief Wedded to West Point Athlete Here.

The New York Avenue Presbyterian Church was the scene of the wedding last evening of Miss Northa Louise Porter, daughter of the Interstate Commerce Commissioner and Mrs. Claude Rodman Porter, to Lieut Richard Walden Mayo, son of Mrs. Jerimiah J. Mayo, of Arlington, Mass. The church was effectively decorated with white blossoms and lighted ivory tapers against a background of dark palms and ferns. The ceremony was performed at 8:30 o'clock by the Rev. Joseph Sizoo, who was assisted by the Rev. Isaac Mayo, uncle of the bridegroom.

The bride entered the church with her father. She wore a handsome gown of ivory satin made on fitted lines. The long sleeves extended into points over the hands. The cuffs were embroidered with seed pearls. Around the waist there was a band of the seed pearl embroidery which crossed in the back, the tapering ends continuing on to the hemline. A full bias train fell from the bands of trimming. Her veil of ivory tulle was held in place by two bands of orange blossoms across the top of her head from which a waist-length face veil and a single band of the blossoms completed the wreath in the back. She carried a sheaf of calla lilies and a small lace handerchief, which had been carried by other brides in the Porter family.

The bridesmaids were Miss Dorothy Porter, Miss Mary Porter, sisters of the bride; Miss Margaret Waite, of London; Miss Margaret Moore, of Alexandria, Va.; Miss Helen Lingenfelter, of Des Moines, Iowa, and Mrs. Charles Hurd, of Washington.

Lieut. Mayo and his bride were assisted in receiving by their mothers. Mrs. Porter had on a gown of flesh lace and Mrs. Mayo was wearing a gown of white lace. Later Lieut. and Mrs. Mayo left by motor for Canada, the latter wearing a smart suit of gray crepe, trimmed with bands of Persian lamb, with accessories to match. Upon their return they will be at home at Fort Myer, Va., where the bridegroom is on duty with the Sixteenth Field Artillery.

Llewelyn, of London, the former Mrs. Alicia du Pont Glendenning, of New York and Washington, who has been spending the past few weeks in New York, will come to Washington on Friday to spend the week-end. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a simple white satin gown made on long lines with the skirt forming the train. Her veil was of Brussels lace and she carried a bouquet of white gladoli and lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaids were Miss Dorothy Kramm, of New York; Miss Mary Agnes Church, Montclair, N. J.; Miss Eleanor Wright, Columbus, Ohio, and Miss Frances Pattison, of Livingston, N. Y. Their frocks were similar to those of the maid of honor, only in tea rose palmetto with matching turbans and mits.

P.-T. A. Leader Urges Home Work Banished

Schools Put Unnecessary and Harmful Strain on Students by Requiring Extra Classroom Work, Mrs. B. F. Langworthy Declares.

MRS. B. F. LANGWORTHY, new president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, has a daughter who used to study well into the night. She chewed gum. A whole package, explained Mrs. Langworthy, because the chewing was uncomfortable enough to keep her awake.

That's one of the reasons why Mrs. Langworthy thinks home work for grammar and junior high students is an unnecessary evil. Her views on home work coincide with those of many other parents and teachers who will take part in a discussion of the question at the P.-T. A. section meeting to be held here in conjunction with the National Education Association convention July 5. But the other faction, which maintains education would be a flop if it had no home work to supplement it, have strong views and will be well represented.

"Will there be an argument?" Mrs. Langworthy was asked.

"Will there be an argument!" was the reply.

For High Schools, Too.

Mrs. Langworthy believes not only are younger students overworked out of school hours, but high school students shouldn't have to cope with home work except to follow up subjects that interest them particularly. It's too much of a strain, she says, to absorb education all day, take a few hours' intermission and then start at it again at night.

"I'm a parent and not an educator, but I have my views," she declared.

And her views, pleasantly definite but not dogmatic, include a passionate defense of what are now labeled educational "frills," subjects such as music, painting, history of art, the first to go when school budgets were pared during the long years of depression.

"Why, they're the backbone of education," she exclaimed. "They're the things that are so necessary to living and things that the majority of students get only at school. If they don't get them at school, where will they? Certainly not at home.

More Languages.

The argument for and against these subjects that have raised so much controversy in the educational world are usually pretty silly, Mrs. Langworthy implies. After all, no one, no matter how strongly in favor of music and art, would suggest the essentials, reading and writing, be lopped off the curriculum, she points out.

Languages are a pet subject with her. She would like to have four or five taught in every high school in the country and regrets that her daughters were not brought up with a knowledge of French and German anyway, with maybe a few other tongues thrown in.

"Living in a Tower of Babel the way we do, we need a knowledge of several languages," is her contention.

Practical Problems.

Mrs. Langworthy has a theory about education, a rather Utopian theory, which would have all subjects, whether "frills" or otherwise, taught in a manner to tie them up with the daily life of the students. Arithmetic under this system would guide the student directly into the realms of budgeteering and bank accounting on a course intended to equip him to handle his life more efficiently.

Is it possible to relate all curriculum subjects to the life of a President?

"It is," says Mrs. Langworthy firmly.

Mrs. Langworthy arrived here yesterday from her home in Chicago and will remain for several weeks until the conclusion of the National Education meeting.

Safety First Rules Trapeze

Those daring young men and women on the flying trapeze don't suffer as many casualties as the thrilled and open-mouthed public watching them think they do, says an article in Popular Mechanics. Big Top fatalities aren't frequent. There have been only half a dozen in this country in 5 years.

The circus artist has perfect confidence in his ability to keep his neck intact. His fears arise solely from worry over the strength of the equipment he works with. Whether the net beneath him might give way, whether the rigging hooks may snap, whether a block and tackle might slip—these are the things to give him pause, not whether he will complete his triple back somersault before catching the tips of his partner's fingers 75 feet above the sawdust.

Years of preparation and hard work on every feat give the performer his peace of mind about his ability.

University Training Lowers Men's Endurance of Drudgery

WHEN college graduates are holding congenial positions in the business world, they are more stable emotionally than workers without college training. But when the graduates are forced into uncongenial work they are more likely to develop "nerves" than the less educated employes.

These conclusions are drawn from a symposium of opinion, collected by the Choose-a-Career Conference from 500 psychiatrists and psychologists. The conference will hold its first meeting in New York, June 26 to 28.

The more brilliant the student the more difficulty he has in performing an uncongenial job efficiently, the survey showed.

Primal Man Steadier.

Among the contributors to the symposium was Dr. A. A. Brill, of Columbia University. He has observed that the average student at the threshold of graduation has a pretty good idea of what he wants to do.

"If he has the money he goes at once into the work he likes," said Dr. Brill. "If he can't afford to do that, he will take something else temporarily. He may be quite a success in this temporary line, but he will never be happy until he is doing what he wants."

In the opinion of Dr. A. M. Rabiner, of New York, the less educated and the more primitive a man is, the less likely he is to give way to "nerves" when a difficult situation arises.

"As man develops himself, acquires knowledge and becomes more emotional, it is increasingly difficult for him to adjust himself to the battle of life," declared Dr. Rabiner.

Crime Danger Seen.

Dr. Edward Hiram Reede, of Washington, has found the college man earning a living under conditions that seem unfavorable to him is likely to develop "nerves."

"The college man who is adjusted to an ideal world where merit wins and justice is expected, finds it hard to get along in the world as it really is," Dr. Reede added.

Most pessimistic of all was Frederick L. Patry, of the University of the State of New York. His contribution to the symposium warned that "repetition of vocational maladjustment in wholesome types of employment leads to unsocial or antisocial interests and activities, such as racketeering, gangster shadetracking, delinquency and criminality, as well as mental disorder."

PILLAR TO POST

Notes on a Personality.

TO KNOW Mrs. Clarence Goodwin is to understand why the pre-Raphaelite painters chose red-haired women for their subjects. The vividness of her hair is an indication of an extremely colorful personality. Not long ago a modern Burne-Jones chose her as a subject for a magazine cover. Her portrait, done in burnt orange and black crayon, subsequently decorated Town and Country.

• • • •

Mrs. Goodwin is fond of people, frankly loves society and the delights of the town; she also adores nature and is a devotee of long hikes in the country—all by herself. Washington this past winter has been vastly interesting to her for she considers it the pivot of the evolution" (and please, she said, don't forget to omit the R).

• • • •

To assimilate all that she has gained in contacts with many interesting people she feels the need of lonely walks in the woods. They are a relaxation and prepare her to enjoy all that Washington has to offer in stimulating experience. On these walks in their Lake Forest estate and at the Goodwin place in Canada, she frequently removes the pins from the shining coils of reddish gold, and permits her hair to float behind her. This action gives her a delightful, dryad-like feeling of freedom.

• • • •

She is a keen observer of nature. A turtle attracted her attention on the grounds of the Chevy Chase Club, where she and her husband, the judge, live when in Washington. She picked the turtle up, admiring its beautiful coloring. She took the turtle up to her room in a box and placed him upon the judge's bed, then forgot about it. Later that night, when the judge was about to go to sleep —well, you finish the story.

Ghost of a Colonel.

RIPPON LODGE, 8 miles beyond Pohick Church on the Richmond highway, was built by Col. Richard Blackburn, the architect who designed Mount Vernon. He was buried at the lodge in 1759. A large slab with an epitaph still marks his grave.

• • • •

Recently Col. Wade Hampton Ellis, the present owner, came upon an old tunnel that led from the house, through a ravine with an outlet near the river. He thinks it was built as a means of escape from the Dogue Indians, a barbarous tribe who terrorized that section.

• • • •

There is a story that the ghost of Col. Blackburn, carrying a lantern, has been seen around the house. The light from this lantern has been reflected many times upon the walls of the house, the superstitious maintain. Col. Ellis has a rational explanation in the searchlight of steamboats as they ply the river nearby.

• • • •

However, he decided to have a little fun with old "Paps," a darky who was helping him uncover the tunnel in the old garden.

• • • •

"Paps," he said, "we are getting close to the place where that old Col. Blackburn has been seen with his lantern. If you see him be sure and address him by his right title. Don't call him Major or Captain, but be sure and call him Colonel."

• • • •

"Boss," the old Negro replied fervently, "if I sees dat man I'll call him General."

WINDING RIBBONS OF BECKONING ROAD will unfurl themselves to thousands of vacationists this summer. Some of these will drive their own cars, of course, but there will be others who prefer a bus. It has been said the bus divided the world into two classes: those who love bus travel; those who detest it.

Two Capital Women Enter Airplane Race

Edna Gardner Combines Nursing With Flying, the Former to Pay for the Latter; Has Given Up Stunting as Too Dangerous.

By Irene Hasbrook.

WHEN Amelia Earhart Putnam walks down the long lines of planes and drops the whie flag of the starter, and one at a time the swift ships taxi across Roosevelt Field, rise and are off on the 30-mile course of the Annette Gipson handicap race, two of Washington's women pilots will be among the feminine fliers competing in this annual race to be held next Sunday on Long Island.

Edna Gardner, who combines the profession of nursing with the sport of flying, is one. Helen Frigo, a parachute jumper with no qualms is the other.

Racing her own fast little ship against a field of experts, Miss Gardner last year achieved fifth place. That's way down the line for her. In her room at the nurses' headquarters of the Naval Hospital are six or seven big first place cups. Recently in Baltimore she raced against a field composed of eight men. She won.

Says Flying Is a Bug.

In her nurse's uniform, looking a bit prim and starched, and not at all intrepid, she sat in her room yesterday and remarked that flying was sort of a bug. One had it or one didn't. If one did, it was there for good.

She spoke of the perils of racing flying in a detached way. There was none of the tension exhibited by some pilots before a race. In a low, pleasant voice she talked of skimming 20 or 30 feet above ground, rising slightly to clear trees, surrounded by the speeding planes of competitors.

"It's too close for safety. But the closer you fly to the ground the more chance there is for speed," she said.

Miss Garner used to stunt. She calmly mentioned loops and rolls as though they require no more effort than parking a car. But she doesn't stunt anymore. "There's not much in it—too much risk."

Flying Seven Years.

She has been flying for seven years and has owned as many planes. Nursing was a more recent interest. Her family, she said, couldn't bring themselves to regard such air-mindedness in a daughter as quite proper or safe. So she became independent. "I had to get a job so I could keep up my flying. I studied nursing."

Like all experienced aviators she has had her crashes, and was exonerated by the Department of Commerce, which investigates all crack-ups with an eye to removing licensees for carelessness. In one she was not only exonerated but complimented. It was this way:

"I set out from Newport, R. I., one morning around the time the sun rose. There was a faint haze on the horizon. I flew for a while and it grew worse. I headed for Long Island. The haze became a heavy fog. After a while I knew Long Island was underneath me, but couldn't see any indication of ground. After circling and circling (it seemed endlessly) I discovered the tops of trees below me and realized it was Oyster Bay, the highest point on the island.

Took a Chance.

"It was one of those times when you have to take a chance. I got the plane going as slowly as possible and swooped down sideways. Very gently, the plane was going only 26 miles an hour, we settled down on one wing. The plane crumpled and we got out. No, we weren't hurt."

The Department of Commerce investigator chided her slightly for going up into the face of a fog, but freely admitted she had accomplished one of the prettiest forced landings he had seen.

The crash didn't bother her.

U. S. Crude? British Girl Decides Not

"Railway Queen" Shatters Notion That Our Men All Are Rude.

BRITAIN'S "Railway Queen"—Miss Gracie Jones, of Holyhead, Wales—thinks American men are charming, despite what she was told about them on the other side of the Atlantic.

"I had heard they were rude and abrupt," she said yesterday on her arrival in Washington, "but I find them attractive, attentive, and altogether pleasing."

Would Miss Jones say they were more attractive than English men?

"No, I wouldn't say that," she laughed.

What did she think of our trains in comparison to the toy railway affairs in England?

"They are bigger and better than ours," she said.

The Girls Are Pretty.

And about American girls—did she find them as pleasing as American men?

"I haven't met any girls yet. But I do think they are pretty and smart looking. I hope I shall meet some of them soon."

"I'll never forget that trip to the top of the Empire State building!"

She didn't know what plans had been made for her in Washington, but she did hope to see the White House, and she would surely enjoy seeing the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Dark-eyed and pretty, this 16-year-old girl—the daughter of a worker in the maintenance department of the British Railways—was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. S. C. Jones, and Mrs. H. H. Neilson, representing the British railways.

Labor Good-Will Courier.

Selected from a photograph as "queen" by the Railway Brotherhood of England, Miss Jones is the eighth girl to serve as a courier of good-will to the working men and women of the world.

Dressed in a white silk sport dress with a green coat and a panama hat pulled over her long, straight hair, Miss Jones also wore a gold chain around her neck composed of eight miniature couplings inscribed with names of countries visited by previous "queens."

When she returns to England, couplings representing the United States and Canada will be added.

While in Washington Miss Jones and her party will stay at the Hamilton Hotel. After a day and a night here—principally spent in sight-seeing—she will leave for Chicago.

"How long do you expect to be in this country?" she was asked.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter Take Bermuda Cottage

Mr. and Mrs. John Franklin Carter will sail July 7 for Bermuda, where they have taken a cottage at the Elbow Beach Hotel for two months. Their small daughter, Sonia, and Mrs. Carter's two sub-debutante daughters, Patricia and Valentine Martyn, will accompany them. Mr. Carter will remain a fortnight and will return to the Capital, joining his family at the end of the season to bring them home. Mr. and Mrs. Carter have closed their home on LeRoy place and are at the Martinique until they sail.

Wearisome or Delightful, Life On Highway Never Gets Dull

Bus Riders' Own Peculiar Spirit of Fraternity Infuses Extra Charm Into Travel for Those Who Enter Into the Spirit.

The vacation flux is on again. After staying home for several summers, people are once more going places and seeing things. The following is the third in a series of articles on vacation travel and activities.

"CAR at gate 2 for Winchester, Lexington, Natural Bridge, Norfolk," blares the loud speaker in the bus station.

Nervous women, well-scrubbed sailors, sweet-faced grandmothers, scrambling children and business men with brief cases rush forward, the goal of each being the seat just behind the driver. They compromise, settle themselves. The baggage is put in, pillows rented. The driver seats himself.

"Last call!" warns the loud speaker.

The car at gate 2 moves off for the open country, carrying passengers to destinations strung out to the Pacific Coast. The travelers begin a friendly and leisurely scrutiny of each other.

All people may be divided into two classes, think the bus pilots; bus lovers and bus detesters. There is no middle ground. The bus detesters sit stiffly, become weary, take no interest in their fellow-passengers, little more in the panorama and wish themselves in a parlor car on a fast-moving train. They find buses fatiguing, nerve-racking, uncertain, and they can't understand why anyone should travel by bus except to save a few dollars at the cost of much personal discomfort.

But bus lovers can't be reasoned out of the pleasure they get from their jaunts about the country.

"Why, it's so much fun!" says an elderly woman about to board a bus going West.

An Arrest Entertains.

"See, there I'll be in Gettysburg at noon. We'll have lunch there. The first time I ever went on a bus our driver got arrested for breaking speed . . . you know how it is, a little fellow in a small town wanting to make an impression by arresting somebody. And our driver was the nicest man. Every time he'd start up he'd ask 'Everybody happy?' And then with him getting arrested and all, why I told my daughter it was the most fun I'd had in years." She chuckled at the memory.

"And you get to know all the passengers and everybody's so friendly," she finished, as, ticket in hand, she rushed for Gate 4 and an all-day ride to Pittsburgh.

The friendliness of people may be the secret of the growing popularity of bus travel. Bus passengers are all friendly. They like to know where the woman and the little boy are going; and if they are to be met. They like to sit on a stool in the rest stations and drink a cup of coffee and eat a generous slice of apple pie. They like people getting off and on; like to know when they cross a State line. They want to feel informal and neighborly and learn all about the county they're traversing.

It's Like a Picnic.

"You get a lot of local history," explained a young woman waiting for a New York bus. "And it's like a picnic. We had the same crowd all the way out to Missouri. We got off and on at the same places. We did St. Louis together. And we had one little girl who was afraid she would get lost in St. Louis. She was going to sit in the station four hours. We took her out and she had the best time. Then we had a dear old lady and she never could hear the driver honking when we'd stop at a rest station. Some of us always had to go and find her."

"Trains tire me more than buses," continued the young woman. On buses I have a good time and a trip doesn't seem long. On a train I just sit and stare straight ahead of me and get awfully bored. I met the nicest man on a bus to Chicago • • •" she started, but never finished, as her bus arrived and she made a leap to get the coveted seat just behind the driver.

Fingernail Tint And Hats Test Paris Prestige

Will Americans Follow French Lead? It's an Open Question.

ARGUMENTS over the power of Paris in setting styles continue on both sides of the Atlantic. With the city on the Seine introducing a host of new ideas for late summer and early fall, it should be comparatively easy to settle the argument, for this season at least, by noticing how many Parisian fashions are taken up by American women.

For instance, fingernails in the French capital are shedding their blood-red lacquer in favor of a pale pink gloss that looks fairly human. But to date American fingertips remain a blatant scarlet. It will be interesting to see whether Paris can tone them down several shades.

Then there is the matter of the beret. After covering their top-knots with miniature pancakes and left-bank tams for lo, these many years, American women this spring went in for big brims in a big way. But the Parisian, after a few peeps from under a cartwheel hat, grew skittish and made a wild dash for the good old beret. Will American women do likewise? Probably not.

At the Auteuil races a few days ago a large number of hats adapted from the pancake beret were worn. The majority had very flat crowns, with draped cushion brims pushed forward over the eyes, or at least over one eye. Some of the brims were pinched in at the sides to form triangles. Stitched satin appeared frequently. Several of the felt and velvet berets, advance fall models, had large birds or wings smashed against the crowns.

Both American and French designers are toying with the Spanish idea, but in extremely different ways.

The Parisian version consists of very short bolero, long, swirling skirt, and that's all. Wide open spaces are revealed in back between bolero bodice and skirt. The two-piece affair is joined in front for the sake of modesty as well as style. Patou is responsible for this formal trend in nudism.

Child's Chirp Starts Rush For Sandals

Rumor That Cork Soles Will Walk on Water Is Exploded.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

AS SOON as the cork sandals were placed in the show case a little girl spied them. Dragging her mother by the hand, she approached and stared in wide-eyed wonder.

Others approached to see what was to be seen, and turned curiously from the sandals to the child, who thereupon piped out: "You can walk on water with those!" Her exclamation brought others to the scene, and soon the rumor was about the store: 'New shoes for walking on water," and those who came to see smiled at the childish nonsense."

That afternoon the phone began to buzz. Incredulous people who had "heard" were calling to see what it was all about. A child's vivid imagination, and beach sandals made of cork, had started a fabulous tale.

It was swell advertising.

No end of people who came to be disillusioned and laugh at themselves stayed to buy sandals.

Cleverly made, with square, low cork heels, thick cork soles, and a band of close-fitting lastex across the toes, the sandals come in red, green, blue and other colors.

News for Stout Women.

The large woman has a difficult time looking her best around the house. By time she buys material for a dress and makes it herself she's spent as much in money and time as she would have spent on an afternoon frock. And if she pays a dressmaker, she's spent more. Unless she's thoroughly familiar with the shops she hasn't an idea where to find a simple, inexpensive house dress. There is a place, though, called cotton corner, located in a large department store. Here a variety of light, neat dresses made especially for the large woman sell for as little as $1.

Chasing Blackheads.

Frequently new things are appearing in the stores, which are said to take away blackheads. One out of five people can suggest a sure cure. But somehow women go on and on permitting blackheads to mar their skins.

Overlooking at least six new products, we venture to recommend a soap which came on the market some time ago. Slow to sell at first, it has come into popularity through long and proven usage. Many stores which do not carry the manufacturer's complete line have stocked this particular soap. And few people who have ever used it will deny that the fine-grained cleanser does a most amazing job of penetrating the pores and washing out the tiny specks of dust embedded there.

The action is so strong that it is wise to use the soap only once, twice, possibly three times a week.

Piggy-Wig Toy.

Just one little pig is having a lot of influence toward teaching children thrift. His name is "Thrifty" and he's a little toy bank.

Unable to talk, he bears this inscription:

$ave a penny yesterday;
Another $ave today—
Tomorrow $ave another one,
To keep the wolf away!

'Thrifty' serves beautifully as a toy. His wide grinning face is enough to make grown-ups smile and children laugh long and loudly. It's quite a lot of fun, too, to keep tab on Thrifty's weight. When he's first taken in he's light and hollow, but what with an everyday feeding of pennies, nickels and dimes, he gains most amazingly.

Woolen Halters.

What looks at first like a sleeveless sun-back sweater turns out to be a woolen halter to wear with beach trunks or slacks.

They're selling rapidly for two very good reasons. First, the high-cord necks and bright colors are extremely becoming. Second, they're light and convenient for tucking away in the suitcase for a week-end beach trip.

There are also lighter cotton halters in a variety of colors.

White Pottery.

The housewife who keeps tab on what's what in house furnishings has probably read that white is "the thing" now. White furniture, white drapes, and some interior decorators will say white floor mats. (Washable, we hope.)

All this leads one to white pottery. A Connecticut avenue shop has lots of it. Vases, bowls, pitchers, even fish-bowl stands. They recommend it for dark rooms, together with white flowers to take suggestion of dreariness entirely away.

The same type of pottery comes also in black—and can be used with white furnishings to achieve striking effects.

Nautical Motif Trims Newest Bathing Suits

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, June 20.—It's time to get in the swim . . . or at least on the edge of it. And there are any number of ways to do both very smartly.

If you're in it, you're in it with a vim . . . ready for action and speed. And it's more than even chances that you'll be wearing the classic swim suit . . . the one that's knit of sturdy wool, made with medium brief trunks covered by a skirt section and with medium low U-shaped back. The kind shown on the figure.

This medium low back is very important if you really swim hard. It's just right . . . stays up where it belongs but is low enough to give your shoulder muscles free action.

Many of the swim suits are minus the skirt section, ending in just brief trunks. And a new one effects a compromise and puts a skirt panel only across the front.

If you take your swimming easier, you can wear those swim suits with straps which do tricks. One of the neatest ones is to tie round the neck leaving the entire back exposed. Others cross in over-all fashion or come down in a deep V to meet each other at the center back waistline.

If your favorite beach allows them, the two-piece suits consisting of shorts and brassiere top leave you just about as free and easy as you can be if you wear anything.

If your'e more apt to be on the edge of the swim rather than in it so strneuously you'll probably want one of the dressier suits . . . one more like the one worn by the right-hand figure. This sailor-color suit is a striking example of the newest idea in bathing suits . . . the use of nautical details. And sailor collars are as smart on bathing suits as they are on sports dresses.

Rubber Suits.

You'll find stars and anchors used in decoration, too, and rope motifs. (Look again at the classic swim suit and you'll notice that its belt looks like a twisted hawser.)

These dressier suits, whether they have sailor collars or not, do have softening details, such as bows, girdles and pleats in the skirt. They are made of silks, satins, acetates and ginghams.

Rubber is a material creating considerable interest among swimmers. It makes an excellent second suit, or one to take on a quick swim because it dries so quickly.

Bathing suits of the type described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

Color Shows Music's Mood

WOMEN have long used color in dress to express personality. Now music is enlisting the aid of color in expressing its meaning.

Students at the University of Wisconsin have built a piano that plays notes in colors so that the notes may be seen as well as heard.

The stage on which the piano stands has 196 vari-colored electric lights arranged on the inner side of a frame about 12 feet by 5 feet and corresponding to a proscenium arch. The electric contact is provided by the piano keys and nine switches arranged above the keyboard. Every octave on the piano has a complete color cycle. The nine switches, corresponding to stops on an organ, provide major color cords.

What Today Means

"Cancer."

If June 21 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. until midnight.

If June 21 is your natal day, you were born in the Zodaical Sign Cancer, whose symbol is the Crab. Males born under this sign vary greatly in their characteristics. Some are of a very retiring, sensitive type, while others are adventurous. Still others possess splendid dramatic ability. The maternal instinct is strongly developed in the female, and love of home and children dominate their lives. Many of the women are supersensitive and very diffident. One characteristic that most of the people of Cancer have is an aversion of having anyone try to force them to do something. They can be persuaded, but not driven. To do their best work, peaceful and amicable conditions must prevail.

On this date business, as a whole, should be good. While money may prove to be a scarce commodity, the likelihood is that you will have ample for your actual requirements. Very little can be expected in the way of social activities. A good deal of the entertaining that may take place will probably be of the "Dutch-treat," get-together type. So if you wish to avoid spending money ascertain before accepting just what sort of a party you are invited to, and where it is going to be held. Questions sometime save embarrassment.

If a woman and June 21 is your birthday, you possibly will find things easier, if you learn to assert yourself more. Do not be afraid of offending people by refusing to let them impose on your good nature. You require for your husband, a red-blooded "he-man," not afraid to express an opinion, and possessing definite ideas of his own. If you marry, avoid being too "mushy," and when occasions require it, express your opinion in a no uncertain tone. You have a great deal of happiness in store for you, and financial conditions will probably improve in a highly satisfactory manner.

The child born on June 21, on arriving at school age, will need to have impressed on it the importance of punctuality. It must also learn to be independent and self-assertive.

The man born on June 21 needs only to be aggressive and tenacious in holding on to a definite purpose in life to succeed. Adhere to the plain, unvarnished truth, and refuse to be persuaded to use guile, and your business affairs will terminate successfully. Love will play an important part in your life. Your greatest happiness can be secured through domestic life and having a home of your own.

Simple Foods Best Display German Skill

From the land of the Rhine come many and interesting food ideas. Not only are the foods practical and nourishing, but the recipes are lively with novel treatment.

Germany invites us into her kitchen today, where the sauerkraut is simmering, the sausages are smoking, and many dishes, delightful to eye and appetite, are being prepared.

By Susan Mills.

GERMAN cooking! One has a mental picture of buxom women and muscular men drinking jugs of beer and consuming mountains of sauerkraut, sausages, mashed beans, gravy and other fat and rich things.

But, gastronomically speaking, Germany's food can be delicious enough for the most fastidious gourmet. It is simple and nourishing, suited to the appetites of the people. Living in a rough, invigorating climate, and used to many and strenuous outdoor sports, the Germans set their tables to fit their needs.

As for sauerkraut, Paris consumes more than either Berlin or Munich. If one goes through the streets of Montmartre or Montparnasse after the theater hour, one sees hundreds of Parisians enjoying the cabbage dish and sausage accompaniments.

Hare Makes Worthy Dish.

Germany's very important contribution to gastronomy is her preparation of game, deer, and especialy cheap hare, which, if prepared in the German way, makes a dish worthy of the best table. The hare is sometimes cut and fried with bacon, seasoned with onions, salt and pepper, parsley, bay leaves and cloves, then simmered in water and red wine.

At Christmas time the traditional dish is served—carp. It is customary to serve the head to the guest of honor. He must be initiated into such matters, or he will fare rather badly. The head contains the most delicate parts of the fish, and if the guest of honor knows where to find them all is well; if not, he may wish to surrender his position to some one else.

Recipe for Beer Soup.

Beer soup is simple and delicious. Bring a pint of beer to a boil with three tablespoons of sugar. Heat a pint of milk.* Beat two eggs and pour the hot beer over them slowly; add milk, always beating vigorously. Serve at once.

Here is a sauerkraut that is a bit different. Boil some string beans in ham or pork stock. Press through a sieve, and warm again; sprinkle with buttered crumbs. Heat a can of sauerkraut with butter or lard and a little salt. Serve the two with fried sausages, broiled bacon or ham.

Sauerkraut may be prepared with apples. Peel three or four apples to a can of sauerkraut; add a little sugar and butter, and stew with sauerkraut until apples are a pulp. Brown a tablespoon of flour with butter and a pinch of salt; add to the mixture and let cook until dry.

If the family has an aversion to spinach or any of its cousins, try preparing it in the German way. Boil until tender and mash. Put in a pan with a good-sized lump of butter, sprinkle with sugar and flour. Add gravy or stock and simmer for half an hour. Serve with fried onions.

Pork With Pears.

A German recipe will add variety to the meat course. Try pork with pears. Cut a piece of fairly lean pork in slices and fry in butter until half cooked. Cut the same weight of pears in halves, peel, cook, and place on top of the meat. Add some water and stew, with the lid on, until tender. It will take about an hour.

Two Germanic salads may be added to your recipe collection. String bean salad is made like this: Boil beans until tender and drain. While still hot add 4 tablespoons olive oil, 1 tablespoon vinegar, salt and pepper and mix well. Cool and serve garnished with anchovies or any strongly flavored salt fish. The other salad is made with any left-over meats, cut in small cubes. Add chopped anchovies, gherkins and capers, pepper, plenty of olive oil, and wine vinegar. Mix well, and serve with slices of hard-boiled egg and whole gherkins.

Avoiding a pun becomes difficult when a dessert is called "Poor Knights." Here is the recipe: Cut sandwich bread into fingers about a quarter-inch thick, and steep in an egg beaten up with milk and sugar; fry in butter till golden brown. Pile in a dish, and sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar. Serve with the following sauce: Boil a tumbler of red wine, thinned with half the amount of water, add sugar to taste, some almonds and raisins. Pour over bread sticks and serve at once.

Painters Annoyed George Washington

Thought Portrait Sittings a Waste of Time.

ALTHOUGH he was the Father of His Country and couldn't tell a lie and was and did all the rest of those noble things copybook sayings insist, still George Washington was guilty of irritation against protrait painters. So one learns from the Boston Transcript.

There was one instance in particular, when Gov. Lee of Virginia sent a Mr. Williams to him requesting a sitting for a portrait for the Alexandria Washington Lodge, No. 22, of the Masons.

The loss of time annoyed Washington, but he sat, nevertheless. The result is a picture described as "the only authentic portrait of Washington as a Mason."

Miss Dinkler Is Bride of John Weekes

Canon Wolven Performs Rites at Bethlehem Chapel.

Important among nuptial events of June was the marriage of Miss Josephine Louise Dinkler, of Macon, Ga., to Mr. John Wesley Weekes, of Decatur, Ga., and Washington.

The ceremony took place in the Bethlehem Chapel of the National Cathedral yesterday afternoon, with Canon Raymond L. Wolven performing the ceremony at 5 o'clock in the presence of relatives and friends.

The chapel was decorated with flowers gathered from the bishop's garden, a part of the Nationally famous Cathedral Gardens. The program of nuptial music rendered by the cathedral organist, Mr. Edgar Priest, included Gillette's "Chant d'Amour," Roger's "Reverie," Schubert's "Serenade," and "Meditation" by Sturgis.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Alexander E. Wilson, jr., wore a smart gown of white embroidered mousseline de soie fashioned along princess lines, fastened high at the back of the neck. In the back of the straight skirt was an inserted fan of pleats which formed the train, and her large starched lace hat was trimmed in white velvet. She carried a bouquet of white Killarney roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Alexander E. Wilson, jr., was her sister's maid of honor and only attendant. Her gown was an attractive garden frock of lemon-colored embroidered mousseline de soie and trimmed with the same material.

The bride was met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man, Mr. W. Elbridge Freeborn, of Decatur, Ga.

Following the ceremony, Mrs. Oscar J. Dinkler entertained at an informal reception. Receiving with the hostess and the bridal party were the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Hamilton Weekes, and his two sisters, Misses Clara and Marian Weekes.

Mrs. Oscar J. Dinkler was gowned in yellow flowered chiffon with a corsage of talisman roses.

Mrs. Hamilton Weekes wore an aquamarine chiffon gown with black accessories and a shoulder bouquet of roses.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Weekes left on an extended tour of the East and Canada, where they will spend a few days in Quebec.

After July 1 the young couple will be at home in the Sedgwick Gardens, 3726 Connecticut avenue.

SLANDER

By Arthur Somers Roche

When Martha Blaisdell learns that Gerald Gerrish, her attorney, who has advanced her money on her own securities, has spread the rumor that he is supporting her, she orders him to sell everything she owns and take what he owes her. In retaliation, he has her served with a summons in an action charging that he advanced money to her on her promise to marry him. Meanwhile, Martha has become engaged to Herbert Cranston, wealthy explorer home for a holiday. His sister, Letty, visits Martha's friend, Trudie Lemming, to find out whether Martha is worthy of him. Also in the picture is Dr. Baxter, who is in love with Martha, too.

"Sure you won't have a cup? Well, for some reason or other Martha's father had acquired a man of affairs named Gerald Gerrish. The kind of a man that wouldn't be seen on Sunday morning without striped trousers and a black coat and a topper. And you know looking at him, that he never wore that kind of a costume until he was 30. Well, Martha's parents died. She remained abroad a year or so, letting Gerrish handle the estate. She came back to America and he began taking her around. You know—he was presentable. He didn't look or act as if he quite belonged, but I guess he was pretty useful to carry coats and that sort of thing. Has a wife somewhere, but apparently they've been separated a long time. And Martha took him everywhere. People aren't as fussy as they used to be before the great depression. I know a lot of men who are invited around simply because they can afford to pay for dinner and theater tickets and know enough to send flowers. Jimmy Munson even put Gerrish up for the course."

Gerrish Is Climber.

She pushed her tray away, and Letty rose and picked up the remains of breakfast and placed them on the table. Trudie lighted a cigarette.

"It's hard to explain Gerrish," she said thoughtfully. "He's a climber. He's suddenly found himself on more or less intimate terms with the class of people he'd never known before. Martha had practically opened all doors to him. And it was too much for him. He wanted to show that he'd been around, wanted to be patronizing. I don't know whether he drank or what. All I know is that suddenly I ran into a lot of talk about Martha and Gerrish, nasty talk. No one seemed to know definitely where it had started, but the general impression seems to be that Gerrish was the source of it. He didn't say anything specific, but the impression got abroad that if he wasn't having an affair with Martha, he was certainly entitled to it under the rules. He was giving her money to live on.

Martha Heard Gossip.

"Now I don't know just how much Martha heard of the gossip. I suspect that only last week-end it came to her ears. This I know: Last Sunday night at the ministry Gerrish made some sort of a scene. People who were there told me about it, said that Gerrish had been drinking and loudly stated that he had never told anyone he had kept Martha, or something like that. One of those denials that would make it certain that the thing he denied would be spread abroad. I imagine there'd been some sort of a split-up between Martha and Gerrish earlier. Anyway, your brother Herbie was there and led Mr. Gerrish quietly out."

Baxter Was Rescuer.

"That type of man hates the people who've given him a lift. You've seen people, securely placed now, who don't even speak to the ones who got them their first invitation. But he's worse than that. I guess he thought it would enhance his value somehow if he could sneer at Martha, or if he could make people believe that a person like Martha would condescend to him, but it's bad enough to know that he exists without trying to comprehend him. It makes me a trifle ill just to talk about him. And now you know everything there is to know. But before you take a stand with Herbie I'd advise you to meet the girl."

"I certainly will," promised Letty. "But who's the man that came to her rescue last night?"

"The nicest youth that's been around in years," replied Trudie enthusiastically. "Dr. Peter Baxter, and he has freckles and red hair and used to play football. He put Dan Treman in the hospital years ago. Bob used to know him and he rang up yesterday and asked if he could come out."

In Love With Her.

She chuckled.

"He'd hardly got here when I knew that he'd come to see Martha. He is as much in love with her as your brother, and more than that can not be said. And he's attractive. Not a pretty man—I guess you'd have to call him homely. But he's so clean and decent and merry—well, that hard-boiled baby, Millie Cragin, took one look and screamed that she wanted him. She's had less than 24 hours in which to strut her stuff, but you know how much Millie can usually do in an afternoon and evening. But I would say that she hasn't reached first base with Peter."

"What is this place, a matrimonial agency?" laughed Letty.

"Cupid's bower, no less," giggled Trudie. "I have to bathe and make myself beautiful against the day. Herbie is on the next floor on the east corner. Dash up, lose your battle gracefully, and tell him that tennis will begin when he's ready. And when you come back here, I'll introduce you to Martha."

Curious to See Him.

Letty smiled mischievously.

"That brutal, suspicious husband of mine is hundreds of miles away. I can see Miss Blaisdell any time. I think I'd rather see your doctor first."

"If any married woman influences his young life with counsel and sympathy, that matron is going to be the lovely Mrs. Lemming," said Trudie.

"Oh-ho," said Letty.

Don't be an idiot," smiled Trudie.

"I won't," promised Letty, and went through the door. As she ascended the stairs she smiled broadly at the idea of Trudie or herself ever casting an eye in any direction save that in which their husbands were to be found. Nevertheless, she was curious to meet young Baxter.

She pounded on her brother's door and he called to her to come in. He had just finished his toilet and was adjusting a tie before a mirror. He smelled pleasantly of witch-hazel and soap.

"Mmm," she murmured. "You must tell Sim the name of that soap—or is it perfume?"

"You know perfectly darn well I don't use scent," he told her. "What pleasant breeze brings you?"

She plunged right into the heart of matters. Between her and her brother existed an accord that disdained lengthy approaches, beating about the bush.

"I heard talk and I came down," she said.

He pulled on a sport coat. In the long mirror he surveyed himself. He passed muster. The white flannels were impeccable and the tennis shoes were spotless. Deliberately, he turned and eyed his sister.

"Talk, eh? About Martha Blaisdell, of course."

"She's the girl I love and she promised yesterday to marry me," he said.

"That being so, there seems nothing for me to say," said Letty. "I'll congratulate you now, and when I've seen the paragon my congratulations will be 20 times as enthusiastic."

He smiled tenderly upon her.

"Always a swell girl, Letty. But you came down here to advance argument, didn't you?"

"There's no argument possible when my brother has become engaged," she replied.

"Which sounds swell, old dear," he laughed, "but isn't sensible. What is it, Letty? The scandal?"

"You're engaged," she said flatly. "But if I weren't?"

"Straight from the shoulder?" she asked.

"That's the way it's always been between us."

"Then I'd ask you to be very sure that you could face talk, to be certain that you wouldn't be made miserable by the fact that there has been and might continue to be gossip about your wife."

Slowly he lighted a cigarette.

"I must be pretty much of a rotter," he said.

She shook her head vehemently.

"Nothing of the sort. But you know, Bert, how you've always been. You've thought the Cranstons were people set apart, sacrasanct. As a boy you worried if I played with the wrong children."

"A snob, eh?"

"That's about it, Bert."

"I've changed," he said. "I know what I used to be like. If a man didn't belong to the Course or the Mallet he didn't really exist. But I've got all over that. For the last six years I've been spending half my time with men who never saw a dinner coat, and I prefer them to my older friends. I don't think of myself as a Cranston any longer; I think of myself as a man with a job, a great many jobs, to do. And I know that there are men doing the same kind of jobs who are much better than I am and they've never been in a New York club."

"Your swell, Bert," said Letty. "It hurts me to hear you talk about yourself. Nobody could be grander. But, Bert, there are things beyond snobbery. There are standards. You demand so much. How will it be if there's ugly rumor, nasty insinuation about your wife?"

"Inasmuch as the rumor and insinuation are false, they're not going to bother me," he replied.

"If you're sure of that," she began. He interrupted her.

"I was never so sure of anything in my life."

She leaped to her feet and threw her arms about him.

"I must have been pretty much of an insufferable prig most of my life, Letty," he said. "That you should think I'd let a lying rumor come between me and the girl I love——"

To be continued tomorrow.

The Tonsil Question.

The tonsils are situated in the throat in such a position that they frequently become garden spots for bacteria. Furthermore, the tonsils contain crypts, or deep indentations, into which food particles containing bacteria may be crowded in the act of swallowing. Sometimes these crypts do not drain easily; hence bacteria in the bottom of the crypts find themselves in position to grow and multiply with great rapidity. The tonsil crypts may serve as incubators for bacteria, setting up infection with resulting inflammation of the tonsil. The tonsil swells and abscesses may form that must be opened and drained. Sometimes, before this abscess formation occurs, there is a seepage or leaking of bacteria into the circulation.

Chronic tonsilitis may result from repeated acute attacks of tonsil infection. The tonsil becomes permanently enlarged and some of its resisting tissue is destroyed. Whenever pus may be squeezed from tonsil crypts that tonsil is a menace to health, even to life.

An individual with a chronic infected tonsil is carrying an unnecessary load because a portion of his energy is used up daily in combating this deep-seated infection. The drainage channels leading from the tonsils to the general circulation are rarely obstructed. In other words, inflammation and swelling do not prevent the entrance of infection to the blood. The lymph glands along the side of the neck may become swollen and may be felt with the fingers; in fact, as a result of constant drainage from diseased tonsils, one or both sides of the neck may feel stiff and slightly painful on awakening. This stiffness may wear away during the day. If this condition is present for any considerable length of time it means that the defenses of the body are being drained, and increasing fatigue will usually be noted.

In the presence of heart disease, rheumatism, neuritis, or any chronic disease, the tonsils should be brought before the bar of medical justice and suspected of guilt until proved innocent.

Woolen Mills Strike Peace Believed Near

Federal, W. Va., Agencies Cooperate in Plan to End Walkout.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 20 (Spl.).—Federal and local agencies today cooperated in reaching a settlement of a strike at the Berkeley Woolen Co. plant here.

Peace reigned at the mill today, where yesterday a clash between spectators, including some striking employes and State police resulted in use of tear gas and night sticks to disperse 1,000 workers and spectators. No one was seriously injured.

State police, sent here in anticipation of further trouble, returned to other sections of the State today.

Those at a peace conference today were H. B. McCormac, manager of the mill; the grievance committee of the strikers, Harry Bowen, a Federal mediator; Joseph Steiner, representative of the A. F. of L.; Trammell Hollis, Chamber of Commerce; Mayor Chris H. Dailey, who acted as chairman; the Rev. A. M. Gluck and the Rev. R. L. Brill.

It was emphasized that the best of good feeling prevailed. Prayer was made by request at its conclusion.

Further conferences, looking toward an agreement, are scheduled. The workers allege discrimination against union workers and employment of the "stretch-out" system on looms using mixed fillings.

The mediators were openly optimistic over an early agreement.

N. C. Lawyer Held For Grand Jurors

Elizabeth City, N. C., June 20 (Spl.).—Attorney W. L. Cohoon, former general counsel for the North Carolina State Highway Commission, yesterday was ordered held for the November grand jury under $250 bond after hearing before Trial Judge W. C. Morse, jr., on charges of secret assault with a deadly weapon, preferred by Attorney J. Henry Leroy, jr.

Leroy testified he was attacked last Saturday morning by Cohoon as he stepped off the elevator in an office building and that Cohoon, with a horsewhip in one hand and a knife in the other, inflicted slight wounds, hitting him from behind.

Cohoon contended he was provoked into attacking Leroy because of a long series of incidents, one of which was the latter's connection with the case in which Cohoon was convicted, but later cleared by the supreme court, on embezzlement charges.

Utility Tax Boost Delayed in Virginia

Final Hearing on Increase in Valuation Set.

Richmond, June 20 (AP).—Increased tax assessments by Richmond, Norfolk and other Virginia communities on the Virginia Electric & Power Co., based on new valuations, may not materialize this year, it appeared today.

In well informed quarters it was said that the State Corporation Commission is of the opinion that the book valuation is not considered grounds for any major increase in assessment and that the commission may decide that it can not materially raise tax valuation without a detailed appraisal of the property in question.

The commission will settle the matter definitely after a hearing June 28 and 29.

Flames Threaten Crisfield Suburb

Three Homes Destroyed in Byrdtown Section.

Crisfield, Md., June 20 (Spl.).—A fire of unknown origin, starting in the home of George Miles, in the Byrdtown suburban section of Crisfield yesterday, destroyed the dwelling together with two others and for a time threatened the entire residential section.

Other homes destroyed included those of Mrs. Ross Byrd and Oscar Howard.

The Crisfield Volunteer Fire Department, unable to save the three dwellings already in flames, poured water on the home of John Messick. Practically all furniture in the Miles, Byrd and Howard homes was destroyed.

Woman Files Suit For $1,000 Deposit

Claim Based on Services to Late Employer.

Frederick, Md., June 20 (Spl.).—Claiming that a bank deposit of $1,000 to pay her for services rendered was withdrawn without her knowledge, Mrs. Carrie E. Fox filed an injunction suit in the Circuit Court today against Mrs. Ada Knock, Catonsville; Mrs. Amanda B. Kiracofe, Hagerstown; Ernest M. Fox, Harrisburg and the Farmers & Mechanics Bank, this city.

Mrs. Fox alleges the late Mrs. Mary E. Meyer, mother of the defendants, deposited $1,000 as a joint account, the money to revert to the plaintiff at the death of Mrs. Meyer.

Mrs. Fox further alleges Mrs. Meyer withdrew the deposit and redeposited it with other money in the name of her children. The defendants, she claims, have refused to pay the claim and have notified the bank of their intention to withdraw the money July 18. She asked that the claim be paid.

Judge Willard issued an order for the defendants to show cause by July 9 why an injunction restraining the withdrawal of the deposit should not be issued.

Past Amateur Champs Not To Qualify

Charles McDonald, First Winner, Eligible, Trio Turned Pro Barred.

NEW YORK, June 20 (AP).—A "Beau Geste" on the part of the United States Golf Association today exempted all former National amateur champions and W. Lawson Little, jr., reigning British monarch, from the qualifying test for the 1934 championship to be played in September at the Country Club, Brookline, Mass.

In the past it was customary for the defending champion alone—this year he is George Terry Dunlap, jr.—to qualify automatically for his title defense.

Match Play This Year.

This year the bars have been let down for 15 former titleholders and Little. This move leaves only 163 qualifying berths to be fought for over 24 fronts in various sections of the country on August 21, unless some of the exempted players pass up the championship. The championship itself will be all match play this year for the first time since 1903.

Among those exempted was 78-year-old Charles B. MacDonald, who won the first official championship in 1895, defeating C. E. Sands, 12 and 11, at Newport, R. I. He also won the qualifying medals in the championships of 1897 and 1899.

"It's very nice of the golf officials to show this consideration to former champions," MacDonald said today. "I'm a little old now and can't go more than 12 holes at a stretch, so I won't be able to take advantage of the chance. My game? Oh, its not so good now, I usually need at least a stroke a hole to stay even with par."

Boxing Too Rough; So This Baer Quits

Atlanta, June 20 (U.P.).—Max Baer was in Atlanta today. Max was dicovered working in the butcher shop of a food store here—just as Champion Maxie did before he started on his quest for the world's boxing title.

The Max Baer here is no relation to the champion, however, but was pulling for him to beat Primo Carnera. Atlanta's Maxie, now 35, said he tried to box when a boy but he quit because "it hurt too much."

Ruffing Gives 1 Hit; Yanks Win Pair

NEW YORK, June 20 (U.P.).—A scratch hit in the fifth by Hal Trosky, rookie Indian, spoiled a perfect day for Charlie Ruffing, red-headed Yankee pitcher as he shut out the Cleveland club in the second game of a double-header today, 3 to 0.

Ruffing became the sixth big league pitcher to turn in a one-hit performance this year. His clubmate, Johnny Broaca, shut out St. Louis with one hit June 14, and on June 6 Bob Weiland and Mel Harder collaborated in a one-hit performance against Detroit, but lost, 2 to 1. Lon Warneke, of the Cubs, pitched two one-hitters against the Reds April 17 and the Cards April 22. Earl Whitehill's 1-to-0 shutout of the Yanks against Lefty Gomez was the sixth classic.

The Yankees won the opener, also, when Crosetti and Lou Gehrig joined with homers in the eigth and ninth to take the game, 3 to 2. It was Gehrig's eighteenth of the season, two behind Bob Johnson.

Pirates Win, 6-5, As Traynor Stars

New Pilot Gets 4 Hits as Braves Are Routed.

Pittsburgh, June 20 (AP).—Coming from behind three times with spirited rallies in which they were paced by their new manager, "Pie" Traynor, the Pirates ended a five-game losing streak today by beating the Boston Braves, 6 to 5.

Traynor got three doubles and a single and counted the winning run in the ninth, scampering across the plate as the usually reliable Whitey Whitney threw wild to Jordan, attempting a double play.

Wallie Berger kept the Braves in the game with two homers. The first came in the opening stanza after Urbanski had been walked and forced at second by Jordan. The other was in the ninth and tied the score.

Nats Must Win Next Four From Tigers to Pass Them

Hopes of Gaining Second Place in Current Series Appear Slim; Whitehill and Bridges Expected to Do Hurling Today.

By Frank H. Young.

LOSING yesterday's 11-inning tussle to the Tigers, after having apparently won it in the seventh, was quite a blow to the Nats' hopes of gaining the runner-up berth from the Detroiters during this series. The defeat shoved the Nats 3½ games behind Mickey Cochrane's battling crew and means that the Washington team will have to take all four of the remaining games in this series to reach their goal.

While the Tigers did not look particularly brilliant afield yesterday, they are an inspired bunch of hitters and fight until the very end and the Nats probably will be more than satisfied if they can land three of the remaining four. This would give them a record of 10 out of 14 against three of the Western invaders and, for some reason or other, they feel confident of manhandling the Brownies, who open here Sunday, despite the fact that Hornsby's gang has been a mighty hard team for the Nats to beat in previous meetings this season.

Whitehill vs. Bridges.

Lefty Earl Whitehill, a former Tiger, will do the native slabwork this afternoon, while Manager Cochrane probably will use Tommy Bridges, the lad whom Sheriff Dave Harris says is helping to keep him in the American League.

There will be big doings at Griffith Stadium a week from today with dignitaries, a band, 'n' everything. The occasion will be the hoisting of the 1933 American League pennant won by the Nats. "The New York Yankees will be here," President Griffith said, "and I picked out this date so that we could wave the flag we took from them right in their faces."

Schulte and Stone started to pull the old "Alphonse and Gaston" act on Goslin's near Texas Leaguer in the first when the center fielder suddenly decided that he had better catch the ball. He did, and then his peg to catch Cochrane racing back to first hit the Tiger manager and paved the way for the run they scored in that round. The ball caromed from Cochrane to the Nat dugout and netted a two-base advance.

Not the Grand Opera Star.

A young catcher named Tibbett, former Providence College star, is traveling with the Tigers. He has a high squeaky voice, so the early comers knew that his first name was not Lawrence, who sings barytone.

Using the rabbit ball played hobs with the Nats in the seventh. Stone and Schulte had to play deep for hard-hit balls, and, when Cochrane and Gehringer hit Texas Leaguers, they both fell safe and figured prominently in the four-run rally of that session.

Dempsey Treating Finger in Hospital

New York, June 20 (AP).—A boil on his finger and too many friends today sent Jack Dempsey to Polyclinic Hospital for treatment of the swollen digit and a rest for his weary nerves.

Since Dempsey's protege, Max Baer, dethroned Primo Carnera as the world's heavyweight champion, it's been a dizzy round of parties and handshaking for the famous Manassa Mauler and the merry whirl finally wore him down.

"I came here for a rest as well as treatment for this bad paw," Dempsey told the Associated Press. He held up for inspection the puffed-up right hand which he had been soaking in a huge basin of antiseptic solution on a table beside his chair.

The usual long cigar missing, he puffed nervously on a cigarette and said:

"You know, ever since Baer knocked out Carnera I haven't been able to get any sleep or rest because of friends and acquaintances coming up to my apartment and my doctor wanted to localize this infection before it spread.

Upset Marks Women's Tourney

Mrs. Pray Defeats Mrs. Emge, 1 Up, on 20th; Miss Faunce Wins.

Mrs. Jack Scott and Mrs. Roland Mackenzie Also Survive.

MRS. L. G. PRAY, of Manor, continued in the role of "dark horse" yesterday in the quarter-finals of the District women's golf championship at Columbia Country Club. In the most exciting battle since match play started on Tuesday, Mrs. Pray eliminated Mrs. Ora Emge, Beaver Dam title holder, 1 up on the twentieth hole.

It was Mrs. Pray's second consecutive upset triumph. In the opening round she unceremoniously removed the favorite, Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring. Yesterday she showed she had lost none of her cunning.

Others who joined Mrs. Pray in the semifinal round were Miss Winifred Faunce, of Manor, tournament medalist; Mrs. Jack Scott and Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional.

Wins with Ease.

Without so much as having to exert herself, Miss Faunce turned back Mrs. Harry A. Knox, of Congressional, 5 and 3. Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, fell before Mrs. Scott, 3 and 2, and Mrs. Mackenzie had a tough time eliminating Mrs. H. R. Quinter, of Columbia, 2 and 1.

So the stage this morning is set for a match between Mis Faunce and Mrs. Scott at 9:30, and one between Mrs. Mackenzie and Mrs. Pray at 9:35. The finals may be either all-Congressional or all-Manor, or Congressional vs. Manor.

Mrs. Pray owned her victory to a trusty putter that guided the winning shot into the cup on the twentieth hole. Mrs. Pray was 15 feet from the pin on her third shot, and Mrs. Emge was on in 3, 12 feet away. The Manor woman sank her putt for a par 4, and Mrs. Emge took 2 to get down, losing the match. On theninteenth hole Mrs. Pray had reached the green in 3 only to be stymied by her opponent. They halved it in sixes.

Uphill Battle.

Mrs. Emge fought an uphill battle after being 3 down at the turn. She won the tenth, twelfth and thirteenth to balance the scales. She took the seventeenth with a par 4 when Mrs. Pray's second caught a ditch, but Mrs. Pray played safely on the home hole for a 5, to Mrs. Emge's 6.

Mrs. Scott benefited by a break in her match with Mrs. Walper, when on the first hole Mrs. Walper knocked her opponent's ball into the cup. Then and there Mrs. Scott took a lead, which she enlarged to 2 up at the tenth, and refused to surrender.

Mrs. Mackenzie led Mrs. Quinter 2 up rounding the ninth. The Columbia entry won the tenth and eleventh, and Mrs. Mackenzie took the next two. Mrs. Quinter came back to capture the fourteenth and fifteenth. Mrs. Mackenzie shot carefully to take the sixteenth and scored her par 4 to close out her Columbia foe on the seventeenth green.

Championship Flight.

Giants Outslug Cubs to Gain 12-7 Win

Mel Ott Foles Two Homers, Cubs Eighth Loss in 12 Games.

CHICAGO, June 20 (AP).—Led by Mel Ott, who drove in six runs with his sixteenth and seventeenth home runs and a single, the world champion and league leading New York Giants continued their stampede through the West today by outslugging the Chicago Cubs for a 12-to-7 victory in the first game of the series.

The victory was the Giants' fourth straight triumph and their ninth in 11 games since taking to the road. The defeat was the Cubs' eighth setback in the last 12 games played at Wrigley Field.

The champions colected an assortment of 18 hits, including a homer by Joe Moore in addition to Ott's two circuit blows, off Charley Root, Roy Joiner, Big Jim Weaver and Bud Tinning. The Cubs' hits off Fred Fitzsimmons, Herman and Al Smith totaled 12.

Curling, 14 to 1 Shot, Leads From Start to Win in Feature Race at Charles Town

Filly Defeats Scotty Don By Length

Clear Knight Is Third, Pulls Up Lame After Chasing Leader.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, June 20.—Curling, a cast-off from the Brookmeade Stable, proved much the best of the field in the Baileysville, today's feature race here in the mountains. In fact, Curling had to be a whole lot the best or she would not have won. In her saddle was one C. Scarpulla, and he was about as useful as 107 pounds of lead, guiding the filly all over the race track. However, Curling had enough on the ball to finish a length in front of Scotty Don and Clear Knight.

It was Curling from start to finish, but those who watch their horses closely were not so sure that the filly would arrive at the finish line with young Scarpulla aboard. But the boy hung on and Curling's courage carried her over the line.

The lavendar colors of Mrs. Lavery, the owner, were showing in front of the field two jumps from the starting stalls and they stayed there all the way. Holland, on Clear Knight, made a game effort to catch the flying filly, and Scotty Don moved up in the stretch to fight a futile battle.

Rider Scarpulla was no help on the track, but he made a whale of a difference in the betting, a large portion of the $28.20 mutuel resulting from his name being on the program.

Clear Knight pulled up lame after the race.

Those who go in for the daily double cashed a $56.40 mutuel on the combination of Nay Nay and Sun Jo. Both paid substantial mutuels in their own right.

The top price of the day was the $46 paid by Lady Gold, a daughter of Bulletin, which also is racing here. Lady Gold won the second race in a stretch drive.

Perroni, Barry Reported Fit For Battle

Stadium Contestants Training Out of Town; Ahearn Seeks Von Reedon Foe.

REPORTED in the finest of fettle for his 10-round engagement with Donald (Reds) Barry at Griffith Stadium Friday, Patsy Perroni wound up heavy training in Boston yesterday and departed for Washington as Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn was casting about for a suitable opponent for Charlie VonReedon, who will head the card at the Riding and Hunt Club Monday, and Matchmaker Charley Swan marked time with his Joe Knight-Henry Firpo lightheavyweight battle, which is to open the American Legion Arena next Wednesday.

Perroni will reach the Capital early this morning and will take only light workouts to keep in the condition he has attained for the Barry match. Barry, a local lad, has been training in New York and probably will not arrive on the scene of battle until shortly before weighing-in time.

Perroni Higher Ranked.

Perroni is ranked one notch higher among the heavyweights than Barry ever has attained, being shoved into the eighth-from-the-top position in hte most recent issue of magazine dedicated to the cauliflower industry. Barry was rated ninth in last month's issue of the same magazine, but relinquished the spot to Natie Brown, another local larruper, in the current edition.

Barry, a fast, flashy boxer who slaps instead of punching, will be conceding everything but weight to Perroni. The Boston boy is expected to weigh about 185 pounds, which should enable him to step nimbly around Barry's 200 plus. He is a good puncher and possibly just as well versed in ring lore as the Southeast red-head.

The Joe Knight—Henry Firpo encounter, scheduled to open the American Legion's new arena at Fifth and Florida avenues northeast, next Wednesday, looms as one of the greatest "naturals" locally for many a day. Knight, a devastating southpaw puncher, is well known here, having been defeated only by Bob Boodwin, whom he later knocked out in Florida, in many local appearances. Firpo is just as good a right-hand puncher as Knight is a southpaw walloper, and the local gambling gentry already is laying odds that one or the other will kiss the canvas for the 10 count before the scheduled 10 rounds have elapsed.

Nats Defeated By Tigers in 11th, 13-10

Two Homers, Double and Single by Manush Are Futile in Thriller.

deep center field for a home run inside the park, chasing three runners across the plate ahead of him and lifting the Nats into a 9-to-6 lead that they couldn't make last.

Nats Use 5 Pitchers.

Five pitchers Manager Cronin injected into the game in an effort to preserve the lead that Manush's mighty bat had given the Nats, but it was not to be. The Tigers returned to the battle in the seventh with a 4-run uprising against Alec McColl and Bobby Burke to take a 10-to-9 lead, and it was not until the ninth that Washington succeeded in tying the game and coincidentally muffing a wide-open opportunity to win it.

Joe Kuhel, a batting nonentity all day, put the Nats on the way to a 10-to-10 tie when he led off the ninth with a triple over Fox's head in centerfield and Fred Schulte slammed a double down the third-base line that brought him home and put the winning run on second base, but the Nats failed miserably in an attempt to get Schulte home.

Luke Sewll put Shulte on third with that winning run by a sacrifice bunt, but at this point Manager Cronin saw a strategical gem boomerang and explode full in their collective faces after he had ordered Pinch Hitter Ossie Bluege to bunt in an attempt to squeeze the clinching run home. Bluege bunted and Shulte dashed for the plate, only to learn that the bunt was a pop fly to Hogsett who promptly turned it into a double play.

Bunters Have Bad Day.

An inning later, Cronin's bunters played him false when the Nats had the winning run on first with none out after Red Kress' single to left. Johnny Stone attempted to lay down the conventional sacrifice, but it was a soft liner that Third Baseman Owen rushed in to grab at his shoetops for an out. Only Owen's wild throw to first base enabled the Nats to escape without a double play on the ball.

Al Thomas, Cronin's fifth pitcher, was the final victim of the Tigers in that eleventh when the Tigers' three-run explosion shattered the tie. Charley Gehringer, the second-best hitter in the league, began the with one out, Rogell walked and proceedings with a double to right Greenberg scored 'em both with his smashing double past Travis, scoring himself a bit later on Owen's single to right, and thus ends the run-scoring, but not the story.

The first unadvertised thrill had occurred back in the third inning when Manush's drive into right field with Stone on base teetered precariously on the top of the fence before deciding to fall back into home-run territory and give the Nats a 3-1 lead that the Tigers tied in the fifth on Owen's triple against the right-field fence that Johnny Stone played with all the temerity of Caspar Milquetoast.

Rogell's pop double with Goslin on base had given the Tigers a 4-3 lead in the fifth when Greenberg smacked the ball that brought the wrath of the entire Washington team down on Umpire Bill Summers who called it a homer, which it appeared to be from the press box.

Greenberg's sock, on a low line, appeared to chin itself over the short screen above the concrete wall wall in left field and drop into the arms of a blue-shirted lad in the bleachers, before bounding out, but Manush stormed in to the plate to shout that the ball had hit the screen and bounced back onto the playing field, but Hizzoner would have none of that, and Manush stormed back to his post, fuming like a Leviathan smokestack.

That 6-3 lead the Nats wiped out in their own half of the sixth after Kuhel beat out a bunt with one out and Rowe was finally forced out when he passed Pinch Hitter Harris to fill the bases. Hogsett came in to pitch and Buddy Myer got a single on a grounder to Greenberg who played the ball badly and a run scored. Hoggsett forced a second run over with a pass to Stone and then it was that Manush emptied the still-filled sacks with a home-run smash inside the park.

But in this wild and wooly game anything could happen, and a lot did, in the next inning, when Detroit scored four runs to take a 10-9 lead. Alec McColl had relieved Crowder and before the Nats could get a batter out the Tigers had gotten two Washington pitchers out. McColl issued a walk to Fox and Cochrane dumped a pop-fly single into right field. Bob Burke came in to pitch and he departed after he had walked Goslin, Gehringer had popped a single into center and Rogell had cleared the filled bases with a triple to center.

Russell finally stopped this rally by the grace of Umpire Dineen's helpful decision at the plate when Rogell attempted to score on a short passed ball and succeeded in the eyes of everybody but Umpire Dineen and the Nats.

The Greatest Whiskey Value in America

In presenting their line of Crown Whiskies to the American public, the House of Seagram chose to wait. They avoided the hurried months that followed Repeal. Actually it was over four years ago that the youngest stocks in Crown Whiskies were laid down to age.

It takes time to make whiskey the Seagram way. Because Seagram has learned in its 77 years of distilling experience, that "time works wonders."

Therefore, today you can buy Seagram's Crown Whiskies and drink them with full confidence. They are truly worthy of the Seagram name. They live up to the high standards the Seagram label has stood for through three generations. Their warming bouquet, their smoothness, and their full flavor will bring forth delighted compliments whenever you serve them.

Knowing that the House of Seagram holds the world's largest treasure of fully aged Rye and Bourbon whiskies distilled in the best American tradition, you have positive assurance that only the costliest stocks have been selected for Seagram's Crown line.

Knowing this, you might expect a high price.

But Seagram's Crown Whiskies, we are glad to announce, are most reasonably priced. So reasonably priced that we can fairly say this—and mean every word of it: These Crown Whiskies represent the very greatest whiskey value on the American market!

In the months to come, undoubtedly you will hear much of these royal additions to the Seagram line.

To the American public, accustomed to paying high prices for fine whiskies, Seagram's 5 Crown and 7 Crown at their modest prices will be a complete revelation . . . May we suggest that you be among the very first to discover the blandness, and the mellowness of Seagram's Crown Whiskies.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Sultan.

The Sultan of Johore, he visited this shore; he looked around and said he found all modern things a bore. The Sultan has the price; he might buy all things nice; he has the plunks in wads and hunks, but cheap things will suffice. Men came with motor cars that shone and gleamed like stars, all fixed with springs, absorber things, that cut out jolts and jars. "Oh, Sultan," then they cried, "let's take you for a ride; in half an hour we will devour the whole blamed countryside." "Such things I don't indorse, I'd rather ride a horse, though to decline your offer fine must fill me with remorse. Bring me an ancient nag that is no hostler's brag, and I will ride both far and wide, and leap from crag to crag." Men halted at his door; "Oh, Sultan of Johore, the feast is spread, come and be fed, we've luscious things galore. There are imported peas and fine Limburger cheese, and sirloin steaks and pies and cakes and soups and ox's knees." The Sultan said, "Gadzook, I hate to snub your cook, but I must eat my toasted wheat, with water from the brook." Oh, who can entertain a man so safe and sane, who does not care for dainty fare, but sticks to victuals plain?

Stocks Decline As Speculative Activity Waits

New York, June 20 (AP).—Speculative initiative was still lacking on the bull side of stocks today and the market drifted downward in slow trading. A break of nearly 3 cents a bushel in wheat and weakness in distillery stocks discouraged support for the share market.

Liquidation was small, however, and volume in the stock exchange shrank to 548,535 shares, compared with 851,635 in the preceding session. The Standard Statistics Co. average price of 90 stocks declined eight-tenths of a point to 80.1.

Both bears and bulls were inactive as they waited for a clearer picture of late summer and autumn prospects. Traders were reluctant to press the selling side, despite indications of further seasonal recession in business, forecasts of a slump in steel operations next month and uncertainty as to how President Roosevelt will exercise the extensive permissive powers given him by Congress.

National Distillers Drop.

National Distillers dropped nearly 2 points below 24, following announcement of plans to offer new stock to shareholders at $25 a share, with an option to lower the price if the company wishes, and to sell 337,000 shares on similar terms to the Distillers Co., Ltd., of Great Britain. Schenley Distillers sold off more than a point in sympathy. U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Crown Cork & Seal and American Commercial Alcohol lost 1 to 2 points.

Two recent weak spots, Freeport Texas and Westinghouse Air Brake, rallied to close fractionally higher, partly on short-covering. American Telephone, Consolidated Gas and other utilities were relatively steady.

Most rails were only fractionally lower at the close, as support appeared with predictions that the weekly carloading report would approximate or surpass the year's peak established in March. Metals eased a little further in face of the signing of the silver purchase bill by President Roosevelt.

Industrials Move Slowly.

Industrial leaders, of the caliber of American Can, General Motors, and Standard Oil of New Jersey, moved narrowly. Steel shares softened, with U. S. Steel and Bethlehem finishing about a point lower, as the July steel outlook brought in a little selling.

Seasonal business recession, as measured by leading barometers of activity, seemed to be slow. A quiet month for the steel industry in July was forecast.

The weekly power figures of the Edison Electric Institute showed a modest gain over the preceding week, but the margin of increase over 1933 narrowed to 5.5 per cent from 7.3, as consumption failed to keep pace with the sharp rise going on a year ago.

Argentine Paper Trade Reported Improving

The Argentine market for foreign papers has been notably favorable during recent months, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Assistant Trade Commissioner Jule B. Smith, Buenos Aires.

Newspaper and magazine advertising, it is pointed out, although seasonally lower, is still large enough to keep newsprint imports steady. Placard and billboard advertising is also increasing. Exports of canned meats during the first four months of the current year were 13 per cent above those for the corresponding period of 1933, which increased the consumption of label paper. The increased packing of fruits, fish and vegetables in Argentina should also increase the demand for this type of paper.

N. Y., C. & St. L. Loads Decline in Past Week

New York, June 20 (AP).—Revenue freight loadings on the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad (Nickel Plate) for the week ended June 16 totaled 12,593 cars compared with 12,670 in the previous week and 12,439 in the same week a year ago.

Loadings on the Pere Marquette Railroad for the same week amounted to 9,224 cars compared with 9,737 in the previous week and 9,584 in the same week last year.

Missouri - Kansas - Texas Lines loaded 7,492 cars compared with 7,-135 in the previous week and 7,329 in the same week in 1933.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Business on the stock exchange continued quiet today, but increased interest was evident in certain sections. Gersi was marked down severely on fresh nervous selling, while Kaffirs improved on South African buying. Oil shares were dull, but international issues and most home industrials weakened. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Although some sections were strong, price movements on the bourse followed the irregularity in the Wall street market. South African mining shares improved on London buying and rentes were firm. The closing was irregular.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Secretary Wallace Comes Close to Fulfilling the President's Promise of Admitting Failure Should AAA Not Work.

By Ralph West Robey.

Many months ago, it will be recalled, President Roosevelt said of the AAA that it frankly was an experiment and that if it did not work the Administration would be the first to admit it. The speech of Secretary Wallace at the annual dinner of the Advertising Federation a few nights ago, it seems to me, properly may be considered to constitute such an admission. The Secretary, it is true, did not say that the AAA had been a failure in just so many words, but from the general content of his remarks there scarcely is any other interpretation possible.

Thus, he said in speaking of the crop reduction plan of the AAA, that it has been mere "stop-gapping" that "can't go on indefinitely." Further, that "it is foreign to the nature of the farmer" and is disliked by farmers as well as railroad people, commission houses and speculators. In other words, the plan neither is contributing to any lasting solution of the farm problem nor is pleasing to the farmers themselves. This is, I believe, the first time the Agricultural Department has conceded publicly that the AAA does not have the support of the farming region.

Offers No Program To Replace the AAA.

The next step, then, is to try to find something to replace the AAA, some new policy. One looks in vain in Mr. Wallace's speech for any realistic suggestions. All that one finds is a vague longing for the "more abundant life," for the "further shore," although he says he does not "know where the further shore is." He thinks "There is a tremendous selling job to create a fundamental, firm, abiding desire in the hearts of the people to go through with this thing . . ." He, according to the press, begged his listeners to think "whether something can be done to strengthen the human desire to live comfortably with the abundance which we have."

Such groping is not encouraging. Even more disturbing were his remarks concerning the distribution of incomes. He has asked his statisticians to determine what would be the effect upon employment and production if everyone received "$2,500 instead of $1,400." They have told him, he says, that it would enable us to "consume nearly 50 per cent more food, nearly twice as much in the way of housing, twice as much in clothing, twice as much in house furnishing, three times as much in automobiles and gasoline, two and a half times as much in doctor's care and six times as much for education," and would give work for 11,500,000 people.

Such Calculations Are Worse Than Useless.

That such statistics are meaningless and worse than useless must be obvious. Increasing incomes by any such degree might well reduce the total volume of employment, to say nothing of making it impossible for one to buy as much with $2,500 as he heretofore has been able to get for $1,400.

The absurdity of the statistics, however, is beside the point. The important thing is that Mr. Wallace has been driven to such lengths in his search for a substitute for AAA. It would be much simpler just to admit that it has not been a success and that today we do not have anything deserving of the term "agriculture program." Then we would be in a position to make a fresh start without the handicap of always having to think of the farmers in terms of the "more abundant life" or, to recall its precursor, "two cars in every garage."

Prime Bonds Improve as Others Lose

Market Sags One-Tenth While Sales Drop to $10,771,000.

New York, June 20 (AP).—There was little change in the bond market picture today, further improvement being shown by prime investment issues, while secondary groups generally pointed moderately lower.

Trading was relatively light throughout the session, transfers totaling only $10,771,000, par value, against 11,332,000 yesterday.

Lack of Enthusiasm.

The lack of enthusiasm for stocks was reflected in the senior list. While a number of the higher grade issues again betterd their top prices for 1933 or longer, they did so on quite small turnovers. No especial stimulation was found in the day's news.

Among loans that either equaled or exceeded their year's best quotations were American Telephone debenture 5's, Santa Fe general 4's, Atlantic Coast Line first 4's, Chesapeake & Ohio general 4½'s, Burlington 5's, Cleveland Union Terminal 5's, Goodrich 6½'s, Goodyear 5's, Kansas City Terminal 4's, Louisville & Nashville 5's and uniform 4's, Michigan Central 3½'s, N. Y. Steam 6's, Northern Pacific prior lien 4's, Northern States Power 5's, Pennsylvania Power 4½'s, Revere Copper & Brass 6's, Shell Pipe Lines 5's, Southern Railway 5's, Union Pacific Refunding 4's, and Wheeling & Lake Erie 4½'s.

Losers of Fractions.

Losers of fractions to a point or more included some liens of Western Union, Southern Pacific, Frisco, Postal Telegraph, Portland General Electric, New Haven, Nickel Plate, N. Y. Central, Missouri Pacific, Lehigh Valley, International Mercantile Marine, Hudson & Manhattan, General Petroleum, Denver & Rio Grande, Colorado & Southern, Rock Island, Chicago & North Western, St. Paul, American Writing Paper, and Alleghany Corporation.

United States Treasury securities were higher on a volume of about $2,100,000. German government obligations rallied fractionally and higher levels were reached by obligations of Japan, Cologne and Belgium. The Cubans recorded further declines.

Curb's Prices Pushed Lower In Dull Session

Trading Slows Down to Merest Ebbing; Sales, 116,000 Shares.

New York, June 20 (AP).—Trading on the curb exhange turned extremely dull today. Stocks moved in a narrow range and leaders closed generally with fractional losses.

Transfers totaled only about 116,000 shares, compared with 168,000 on Tuesday. The tape barely moved in the late part of the session.

American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, Atlas Corporation, General Aviation, Gulf Oil, Cities Service, Hiram Walker, Distillers Co., Ltd., Humble Oil, Niagara Hudson Power, and Pioneer Gold were among issues showing losses ranging up to three-fourths of a point.

Technicolor experienced a moderate amount of selling and fell off a full point at one time. It closed with a net decline of five-eighths of a point.

Quaker Oats, St. Regis Paper, Hudson Bay and Swift International scored minute gains. American Cyanamid B, American Superpower, Wright Hargreaves and Standard Oil of Indiana resisted the lower trend, but were unable to advance.

Reserves of Reichsbank Continuing to Decline

Berlin, June 19 (AP).—The Reichsbank report for June 15, issued today, shows a continued decline in the bank's reserves and banknote coverage which dropped to 2.9 per cent as compared to 3.4 per cent in the preceding week and 10.6 per cent one year ago.

In the last week, the withdrawal of 20,000,000 marks in gold and foreign exchange brought down the reserves to 100,568,000 marks (about $40,227,000), owing to the Young loan interest payment of 5,000,000 marks and payment for imports.

The moratorium, now operating, is intended to stop these withdrawals.

Wheat Plunges Down Under Stop-Loss Sales

Values Reach Lowest Point Since May 27; Corn, Oats Off.

Chicago, June 20 (AP).—A downward plunge of almost 3 cents a bushel went hand in hand today with an outburst of stop-loss selling in the wheat market.

Drenching rains at places in drought districts Northwest, together with enlarged receipts Southwest, pulled buying support from under wheat values, and gave momentum to selling.

A further unsettling factor was reported possibility of arrangements whereby Germany would exchange manufactured articles for grain from Argentina.

Wheat Closes Heavy.

Wheat closed heavy at the lowest level reached since May 27, 2⅜ to 2⅞ under yesterday's finish; corn, ⅞ to 1⅛ down; oats, ⅞ to 1 cent off, and provisions unchanged to 15 cents decline.

Unofficial advices from spring crop States said estimates of final 1934 production of wheat were being increased owing to rains and cooler temperatures. Winter crop States, notably Kansas, reported also that wheat heads had filled surprisingly well, and that production forecasts were being revised upward.

One large elevator company suggested the Kansas harvest would total 78,000,000 to 82,000,000 bushels, an amount contrasting sharply with previous reports of 63,000,000.

The peak of the Kansas movement of newly harvested wheat was authoritatively predicted as likely to be attained much earlier than usual, perhaps the first week in July.

Meanwhile, with excellent weather, harvesting of wheat was reported as progressing fast not only in the Southwest but in Nebraska and on the North Pacific Coast. Emphasizing bearish sentiment were Winnipeg messages saying export demand there for wheat appeared to be lacking.

Wheat Stocks Sufficient.

Cables were also received asserting that stocks of wheat in Great Britain were sufficient until new crops were available, especially in view of offerings from Argentina, Australia and France, without mentioning Canada.

Corn and oats eased down owing to wheat weakness and on account of improvement of the corn crop outlook because of rains.

Daily Oil Yield In Barrels Put At 2,609,450

Cracked Gasoline Output Averages 445,000 Units for Week.

The American Petroleum Institute estimates that the daily average gross crude oil production for the week ended June 16, 1934, was 2,609,450 barrels. Daily production for the four weeks ended June 16 averaged 2,531,700 barrels. Comparative figures are set out below.

Reports received from refining companies owning 89.7 per cent of the 3,780,000-barrel estimated daily potential refining capacity of the United States indicate that 2,375,000 barrels of crude oil daily were run to the stills operated by those companies, and that they had in storage at refineries at the end of the week 34,025,000 barrels of finished gasoline, 6,993,000 barrels of unfinished gasoline and 104,363,000 barrels of gas and fuel oil. Gasoline at bulk terminals, in transit and in pipe lines amounted to 18,370,000 barrels.

Cracked gasoline production by companies owning 95.8 per cent of the potential charging capacity of all cracking units averaged 445,000 barrels daily during the week.

The complete report for the week ended June 16, 1934, follows in detail:

R. G. Fletcher Is Dead at 53

Burial Set for Friday; Active in Fraternal Circles Here.

Richard G. Fletcher, 53, of 4808 Nebraska avenue northwest, former president of the Fletcher Fireproofing Co., and prominent in contracting and fraternal circles here, died yesterday in Garfield Hospital after an illness of about six weeks.

Many structures in the District were served by Mr. Fletcher's company, and one of his most notable achievements was the fireproofing of the Union Station.

A native of New Hampshire, Mr. Fletcher came to Washington more than 30 years ago. He was a thirty-second degree Mason and past commander of Columbia Commandery of Knights Templar. He was an active member of St. Columbus' Episcopal Church, and once served on the board of the National Cathedral School.

During the war with Spain Mr. Fletcher was a noncommissioned officer and later was on duty in the Philippines. He was a member of Dewey Post, Spanish War Veterans.

Mr. Fletcher is survived by his widow, Mrs. Nellie Clark Fletcher; six sons, George, Robert, Richard, jr., Charles, John and William Fletcher, and two daughters, Mrs. John Bowling, wife of Lieut. John Bowling, U. S. N., on duty in Honolulu, and Miss Betty Fletcher.

Funeral services will be held at his home tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. and at St. Columbo's Episcopal Church at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Bridge Problems.

Bridge problems are becoming more and more popular. Actually the average Bridge problem bears little relation to the play of a hand at Bridge except that it tends to accentuate the so-called "expert" situations such as those involved throw-in plays. However, the Bridge problem is now so popular that on street corners, in restaurants and even in theaters, you will see people poring over the printed diagram, trying to figure out how to make four tricks where only two meet the eye.

The nucleus of every problem is an end situation in which there may be as few as three or four cards in each hand—a form in which the solution will generally reveal itself upon inspection. The wily constructor of problems must therefore make it necessary for the solver to make some bizarre or intricate play or series of plays in order to arrive at the end-play situation.

The two examples below are five-card end-play situations:

In each case the hand is played without trumps. South is in the lead and must win four tricks. In Figure No. 1 it is obviously disastrous to let East in. Nothing can be done with Dummy's hand. The heart is an obvious loser and it should take no experienced player long to decide to put West in after leading the diamond Ace. In figure No. 2, however, the end is not so apparent. West's cards are seemingly unimportant. The situation in Dummy is not obviously hopeless, nor does it appear so obviously disastrous to let East gain the lead. Fundamentally, however, the two hands are the same. South leads the diamond Ace, upon which Dummy makes the seemingly prodigal discard of the heart ace, and when South leads the deuce of hearts, cleverly throwing the lead to West, the Ace of spades is discarded. West's hand is now stripped of everything but spades, and South triumphantly wins the last three tricks with his spade tenace.

While it may appear like a shameful waste of good cards, this is the only way by which South may take four tricks. As I said, problems and problem construction do not bear a close relation to bridge, but a study of the propositions presented in problems does help every player in coping with the occasionally extremely difficult playing situations presented to him.

D. C. Pilot Held By N. Y. Police

Charged With Theft of Truck Containing Gasoline.

The fates were unkind to Philip Mohun, known here as an aviator and former holder of a student pilot license. He told New York police yesterday that he was "amazed" to find himself under arrest when he landed in the police line-up, charged with absconding with a truck loaded with 1,500 gallons of gasoline.

Mohun, who gave his address as "22 California avenue, Washington, D. C.," had been drinking before he drove away with the truck, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Officials here at the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce, said that records show that Mohun had a student pilot's license, but that it was revoked in 1930 for "acts detrimental to the morale of pilots and mechanics in that he was convicted at Atlanta, Ga., of the theft of an airplane."

Department of Commerce records also revealed that Mohun's application for a transport license was cancelled by a Commerce Department inspector. The department had no record of his Washington address, but revealed that the aviator's permanent address was listed at Roanoke, Va., and at the time his license was revoked he lived at Atlanta, Ga.

Mohun told New York police that he had flown up from Washington a few days ago.

Pope Plans Penal Code

New Regulations Based on Italian Rules Ready Soon.

Vatican City (U.P.)—Italian penal law generally is used here with a few amendments and changes dependent on Vatican rulings and canon law.

A new penal code for Vatican City is to be presented shortly for the approval of His Holiness, who instituted a special commission to examine the matter in 1930.

The new code follows the Italian code fairly closely in nearly all sections, but takes account in some places of the peculiar position of Vatican City as a sovereign state inclosed in the territory of another state.

The new Vatican penal code will be the first of its kind since the "Regulations" issued by Pope Gregory XVI in 1831, when the temporal power still existed.

Further studies and projects for amendments of the Papal states penal code were made in 1847. The famous jurist, Cardinal Mertel, worked on the code.

No new code was put into force until the Vatican City, state created by the Conciliation or Lateran Treaties of February, 1929, decided to adopt the Italian penal code in June, 1929.

Boone Is Sued Again in Crash

$10,000 Asked in Action Against Former White House Physician.

Capt. Joel T. Boone, U. S. N., former White House physician, was named defendant in a suit for $10,000 damages yesterday because an official car in which he was riding struck a parked car on the Baltimore Pike, April 19, 1932.

Everett G. Phelps, real estate operator, filed the suit. He claimed that Capt. Boone's car struck his machine when he stopped it to fix a window. Mr. Phelps received severe injuries, although his wife, who had remained in the car, escaped unscathed, the petition asserted.

Mrs. Phelps filed suit against the naval officer in the Municipal Court to recover the damages to the car. She lost her case there, but the District Court of Appeals reversed the decision, and the United States Supreme Court upheld the latter.

Capt. Boone was returning from Baltimore, where he and a party of friends had attended the opera. His defense was that the car was a Government car, and that he was on official business because he had to hold himself in readiness at all times for a call to the White House. However, the higher courts held that he was in charge of the car and was responsible for its operation.

World Halts Pay Slashing

America Alone Increases Outlay of Wages to Help Industry.

Geneva, (U.P.)—The United States is the only nation deliberately increasing pay rolls in order to stimulate industry and reduce unemployment, according to H. B. Butler, director of the International Labor Office.

The rest of the world is now beginning to give up wage cutting, mainly because the economic situation is improving. Butler maintains that slicing pay rolls did not improve matters at all. In fact, he strongly suspects "it may possibly have worked in the opposite direction."

That is, cutting salaries may have caused meager returns for employers, instead of profits. Also longer bread lines may have resulted from wage slashing.

"Where consumption or buying power has been seriously depleted by drastic wage cutting, aggravated unemployment and crippled production seem to have been its usual accompaniment," says Mr. Butler. That is the lesson he draws from a close study of reams and reams of official documents containing wage ups and downs of the world's millions of workers.

Catholic Farm Paper.

Milwaukee, Wis. (U.P.)—The Catholic Farmer has been started here as a supplement to the Catholic Herald, official weekly newspaper of the Archdiocese of Milwaukee. The publication, edited by Joseph M. Sevenich, former farm columnist of the Herald, was authorized by Archbishop Samuel A Strich of Milwaukee. The first issue appeared in May.

Gigolos Face Wolf at Door

Nice, France (U.P.)—Gigolos here are having a rough time of it financially, because wealthy women are reducing their expenses.

"Wages" have crashed to where a hodcarrier's helper makes more money than a gigolo. In the good old days an honest gigolo easily made $60 a day by dancing just a few hours in the afternoon and three or four hours at night. If he was dishonest, he naturally made more, according to what his partner's pearls and jewels were worth.

Today's gigolo is satisfied if he picks up $5 a day.

Recently "Handsome Looie" Don, at one time the Riviera's most prosperous gigolo, committed suicide. In the midst of what remained of his former splendor, he shot himself through the heart. The one maid that remained out of his numerous staff of servants found him dead in the library of his villa, which had been heavily mortgaged.

His luxurious sport model car was about to be confiscated for debt. And "Handsome Looie" still was getting $15 a dance from his de luxe clientele, where the ordinary "worker" has to be content with 75 cents or $1, but it wasn't enough to keep his establishment going.

Wild Geese Spread Gospel.

Williams Bay, Wis. (U.P.)—A wild goose, one of the winged missionaries used by Jack Miner, Kingsville, Ontario, Canada, naturalist, to spread the gospel, was found here recently by Walter L. Everson. A tag on the bird's leg dated in the spring of 1930 bore Miner's name and address and the Scriptural message, "With God all things are possible." Miner informed Everson that he attaches similar tags to hundreds of fowl that visit his sanctuary.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It was only a comparatively few years ago that the recording of sound, dialogue and music for the films presented a problem of the most abstruse nature.

Ridiculous as it seems today, it was no more than five or six years ago that the belief still prevailed that the microphones could do nothing whatever with certain voices, and their owners, therefore, abandoned their screen careers and took up other pursuits

Corinne Griffith was one of these. There was great question for a time, too, whether Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell ever would be able to register sufficiently well to be successful on the talking screen. The same doubt existed as to Richard Barthelmess' vocal equipment and its recordability.

These are only a few instances that cling tenaciously in memory by reason of the prominence of the stars involved.

The advent of sound to the cinema inscribed a huge question mark upon the potential career of every player in Hollywood.

Not Yet Perfect.

At the present time we look upon dialogue and sound recording as pretty thoroughly perfected. It seems that the sound engineers and studio experts do not share this optimism. There is still a long way to go to make sound recording perfect, according to these able gentlemen.

There is every reason to expect that progress made in naturalness of motion picture reproduction of both dialogue and music in the 1933-34 season will be just as notable during the 1934-35 season and will continue to enhance public interest in, and salability of, studio product, in the view of Carl Dreher, chief of the RKO-Radio Pictures sound department.

More natural reproduction in motion pictures has been brought about this past year through what is known as high-fidelity, or wide-range, recording, Mr. Dreher points out. This entails improvements in the acoustic characteristics of both recording and reproducing equipment.

The engineers of the RCA-Victor Co. and RKO-Radio Pictures, working in close cooperation, have spent a great deal of time and effort in the endeavor to bring sound on the screen as close to perfection as possible.

"Sound Perspective."

The aim, of course, is ever to make the sound emanating from the silver sheet natural, unobtrusive and at the same time sufficiently dramatic for the purposes of the subject being projected.

This means that in picking up the original sound the microphone must be kept out of the camera field at all times and yet the dialogue made to seem at all times to be coming with natural volume and acoustic properties from th. lips of the various speakers as they move about the scene.

This is what is known as "sound perspective." Attaining it is largely a matter of experience and skill on the part of the personnel engaged in making the picture. I. requires close cooperation among the sound men, cameramen and directors.

Perfect sound quality should be indistingiushable from original dialogue as heard in most portions of the better legitimate theaters. That is the aim of the sound experts in the season of 1934-35.

It may bear repeating that in the view of this column the first talking picture was better, of its kind, than the first telephone, the first automobile, the first locomotive, the first steamboat or the first airplane. Betterment since has been made in almost unbelievable strides and the end is not yet.

Acknowledgment is hereby made of numerous communications, both telephonic and through the mails, concerning comments that have been made by this department on the Nation-wide campaign being waged by religious, club and civic groups for a cleaner screen and a chastened cinema. All have been listened to or read with keenest interest. Some, obviously, express the viewpoints of extremists. All that warrant it will be given consideration in the dramatic columns of The Post in due course.

Sophie Soars.

It is the assiduous Miss Paula Gould, Broadway publicist, who apprises me that Sophie Tucker is easily the busiest player in London.

Following her command performance at the Palladium a few weeks ago for King George and Queen Mary, the famous American "last of the red-hot mammas" sang again for Her Majesty the Queen at the Drury Lane Theater last Friday at a charity matinee.

This week, Madam Sophie opened at the Troxy Theater in Whitechapel, the Jewish district of London. She played to more than 12,000 patrons the first day and was amazed when, after numerous calls from the audience for "Yiddishe Mamma," women started to weep hysterically and several had to be carried out of the theater as she sang the song. She was barely able to finish the number.

She learned later that the neighborhood is full of German Jewish refugees and the song "Yiddishe Mamma" was more than they could bear.

Picked the Winner.

On Derby night, the Maharajah of Rispipio gave a party in Madam Tucker's honor at the Hotel Savoy because Sophie had picked the winning horse in the race, Windsor Boy, which is owned by the Maharajah.

Her triumph on the other side has been so overwhelming that despite tentative bookings in America to begin July 4, she will not return to the States until well into the fall. After playing Glasgow, Manchester, Birmingham and Liverpool, she is scheduled for two concerts in Holland on August 4 and 5.

The old girl is having herself a time and no mistake!

"Bring on the Girls" is the title selected by George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind for the farce they are writing for Sam H. Harris. Jack Benny, now one of the most popular of the radio personalities, recently developed over the air waves, will have the leading role. It is understood that the stage engagement will not be permitted to interfere with his broadcasts.

Music Box Records.

The 300th performance of "As Thousands Cheer" was chalked up at the Music Box in New York on June 12.

There is every reason to believe that the Irving Berlin-Moss Hart revue will run straight through the summer and that it will eventually achieve an engagement of more than a year's duration.

To date three Music Box attractions have attained that distinction—the "First Music Box Revue," "Cradle Snatchers" and "Of Thee I Sing."

It is interesting to note that since this popular playhouse was first opened 15 years ago it has housed 20 attractions, of which only two were failures. This is a record not even approached by any other Broadway theater.

Lew Brown has engaged Roscoe Ates, stuttering comic of both stage and screen, for his prospective August musical show. Other members of the cast, so far, are Mary Brian and Joe Penner. It is safe to forecast that the staccato Mr. Ates will be a hit.

This is suggested by the easy manner in which he "stole the show" the night the members of the "Moulin Rouge Caravan" made their personal appearance on the stage of Loew's Palace last winter.

Dorothy Dunbar, former wife of Max Baer, by the way, was a member of that snowbound troupe and could find something nice to say about everybody in the world but Max. Not that it matters.

We Miss One.

"Tight Britches," which will be the first production for the new season of Rowland Stebbens, who operates as Laurence Rivers, Inc., and was the producer of Marc Connelly's "The Green Pastures," will not, after all, have its tryout week in Washington.

One learns, instead, that "Tight Britches," a play of the North Carolina mountains, by John Tainter Foote and Hubert Hayes, is to be presented in the Beach Theater, West Falmouth, Mass., the week of July 9.

The play is now in rehearsal in the Avon Theater, New York, under the direction of Miriam Doyle.

The cast for the tryout and subsequent Broadway engagement, if any, includes Jean Dixon, Joanna Roos, William Ingersoll, Mary Orr and Sheppard Strudwick, seen here last season both with Ina Claire in "Biography" and later in the Theater Guild's comedy, "Jig Saw," which closed the regular season at the National.

Handicap Note.

Old Melodrama Begins Season Of Barn Plays

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

Cheering the forces of good, weeping with the heroine in her tragic plight and hissing the dastardly villain, a capacity audience last evening rolled back the pages of theatrical time, reliving the sad story of "The Octoroon" as interpreted by players of the Roadside Theater in their maiden performance.

The nearly 250 who journeyed to Halpine, Md. (15 miles from The Post Building) to revel in the novelty of a play 75 years old, were well repaid, finding in Dion Boucicault's melodramatic presentation of Louisiana life in the mid 1800's truly a new type of entertainment.

Grossly overplayed—indeed, making no pretense at any moderation—the cast drew from the work every exaggerated drop of dramatic worth; the comedy bold and lusty, the tragedy deep and poignant and the villainy cold-blooded and heinous.

But it was different—and therein lies the merit of the offering. In the title role, the charming one-eighth negress, was Ruth Hatrick, who read her lines with a disarming sincerety and ingenuousness which tended to belie the exaggeration of the others. Howard Frederick was the collar-ad hero, who was forced many times to relinquish some of his claim to principal honors.

Outstanding—and the reason for really seeing the production—was the villain: and such a swell villain Eugene Kressin made! He was the apothesis of the hissable, and the audience responded voluminously in kind, which, indeed, came little short of actual cheers at his (here) timely end.

Thomas Matthew Cahill, mainstay of the support, had, as the second overseer for Plantation Terrebonne, a part that admirably fitted him, one that he could play—and overplay—for all it was worth and still ring with sterling clarity. A grand job by a grand actor.

Among the others turning in praiseworthy performances were Janet Coon as the quadroon boy who meets an untimely end; Frances Brunt, as the other girl; Ralph S. Fowler, Mario Geraci, Edward Prescott, Harrison R. Hathaway, Charles B. McInnis, Walter Pick, Forester Sicard, Rose Skopp, Mrs. C. M. McInnis and Betty Rice.

In staging, the production was no less a burlesque. Adequate, the settings, designed by Edith I. Allen, reflected the mode of the time. Dorothy Croissant designed the picturesque costumes. Anton Hardt directed the play. Incidental atmosphere music was furnished by Louis Malone at the piano.
